INDIANAPOLIS

Enters Upon a New Year More Enthusiastic Than Ever Before in Our Happy Position as Hosts to Visitors From All Parts of the Nation

The past twelve months taught the Hoosier capital many things about increasing the comfort and the pleasures of its guests. Our visitors in 1930 may expect to profit from these lessons. We seek constantly for new ways and means of making your stay here pleasant, profitable and eudcational.

Most cordially we extend wishes for a highly successful year and we hope sincerely that your sojourn here may open some new door to such enterprise.

Remember Throughout the Year That

Indianapolis Stores
Indianapolis Theatres
Indianapolis Hotels
Indianapolis restaurants

have enjoyed having you and have tried to serve you in a way that would give you a keen desire to return.

SPORTS

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU INDIANAPOLIS

If *Diogenes Came to Indianapolis

* Diogenes—Ancient Greek Philosopher, remembered for his fruitless search for an honest man.

Diogenes wouldn't have to weed out so very many impossible prospects were he to institute a search for an honest business man in Indianapolis today.

There are characteristics which indicate to anyone that here are men who may be trusted.

The accuracy and truth of Indianapolis advertising is no coincidence.

Trade where you know you will be fairly treated, and before entering into any investment transaction with any firm with whom you are unfamiliar, or regarding whom you can learn little or nothing, consult the Better Business Bureau for information.

Reputable firms welcome investigation. Protection costs you nothing.

The appearance of this Public Service Message in these columns is evidence that this publication subscribes whole-heartedly to the principles of the Better Business Bureau, and co-operates with the Bureau in protecting you . . . even to the extent of refusing to accept the advertising of firms whose advertising and sales policies are proved to be contrary to public interest.

The BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU, Inc.

531 Occidental Bldg. LIncoln 6446

This organization is supported by reputable business institutions and operates without profit to promote public confidence and business integrity in advertising, selling and investments. Our service is offered without charge—we have nothing to sell.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

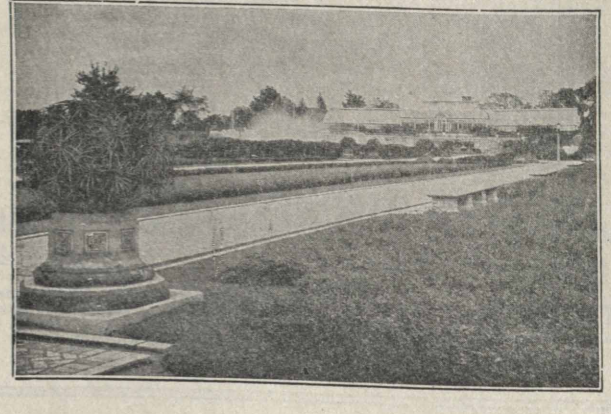
Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

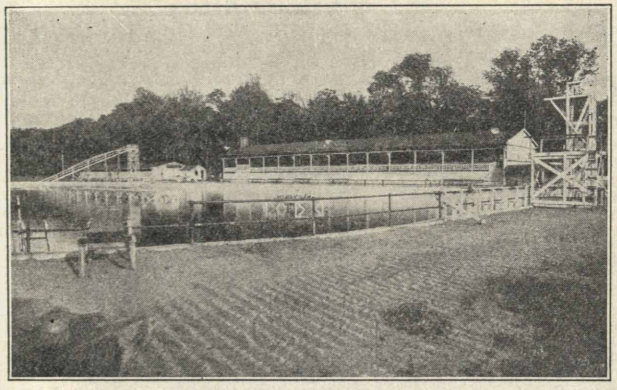
St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.



AMUSEMENT PARKS



Riverside Park, Broad Ripple Park and Walnut Gardens are three fine, big amusement parks where the entire family may enjoy a day's fun. Broad Ripple boasts the largest concrete swimming pool in the world where many national meets are held.

Broad Ripple Amusement Park—1200 East 63rd Street. Reached by College Avenue car marked Broad Ripple. An amusement park with the largest concrete outdoor pool in America. A zoo. Also dancing, rides and other amusement devices. A picnic ground with shade.

Riverside Amusement Park—30th Street and White River. Rides, a large dance pavilion, skating rink and other amusements. Reached by Riverside car.

Walnut Gardens—Seven miles south of the city on the Mooresville pike. Dancing, chicken dinners, etc. Reached by T. H. I. & E., Martinsville Division, to Camby.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

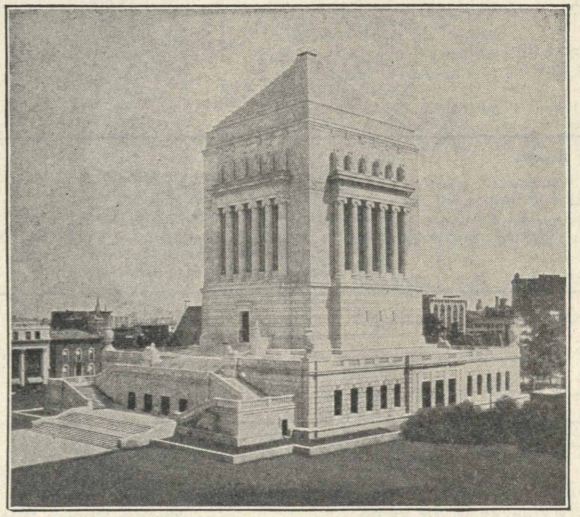
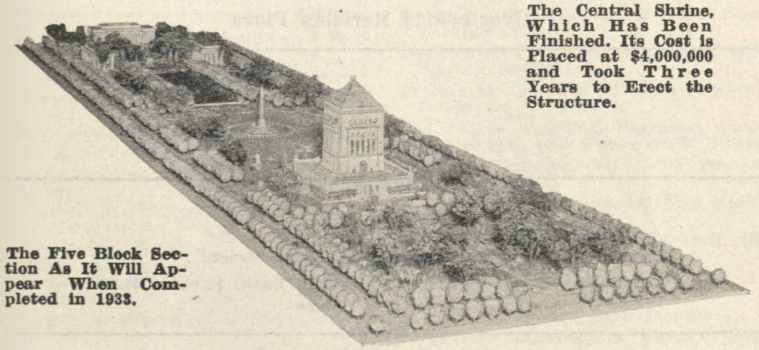
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

HOW TO GET ABOUT THE CITY

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

1, Union Station. 2, Traction Terminal Station. 3, Federal Building. 4, Statehouse. 5 Courthouse. 6, City Hall. 7, War Memorial Plaza (Section).

AN AMERICAN CITY

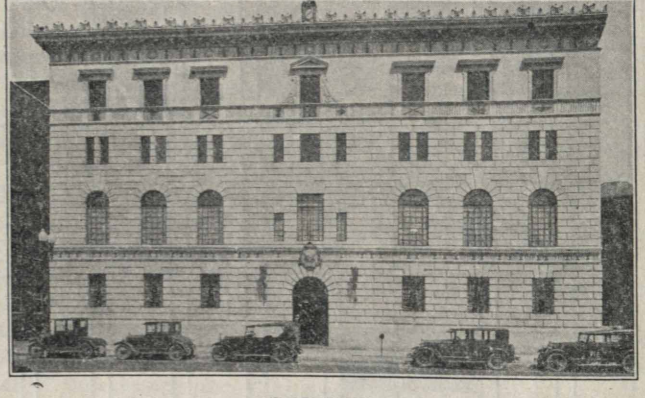
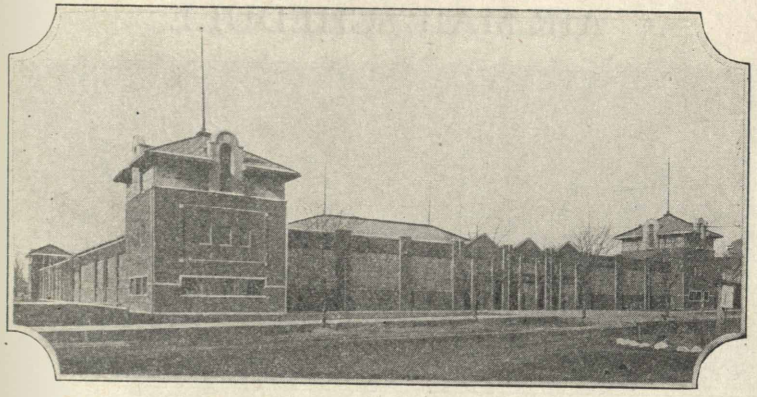
CADLE TABERNACLE

Five minutes' walk from the downtown hotel district; annually houses many large conventions and expositions. It contains 40,000 square feet of floor space or seats 10,000 persons.



ARMORY

A new United States Armory, just completed at a cost of $425,000, offers splendid facilities for a large convention. Located at 721 North Pennsylvania Street.



MANUFACTURERS' BUILDING

EXPOSITION BUILDING

INTERIOR OF EXPOSITION BUILDING

For larger expositions and exhibit events, the Manufacturers' Building and the Exposition Building at the State Fair Grounds are available.

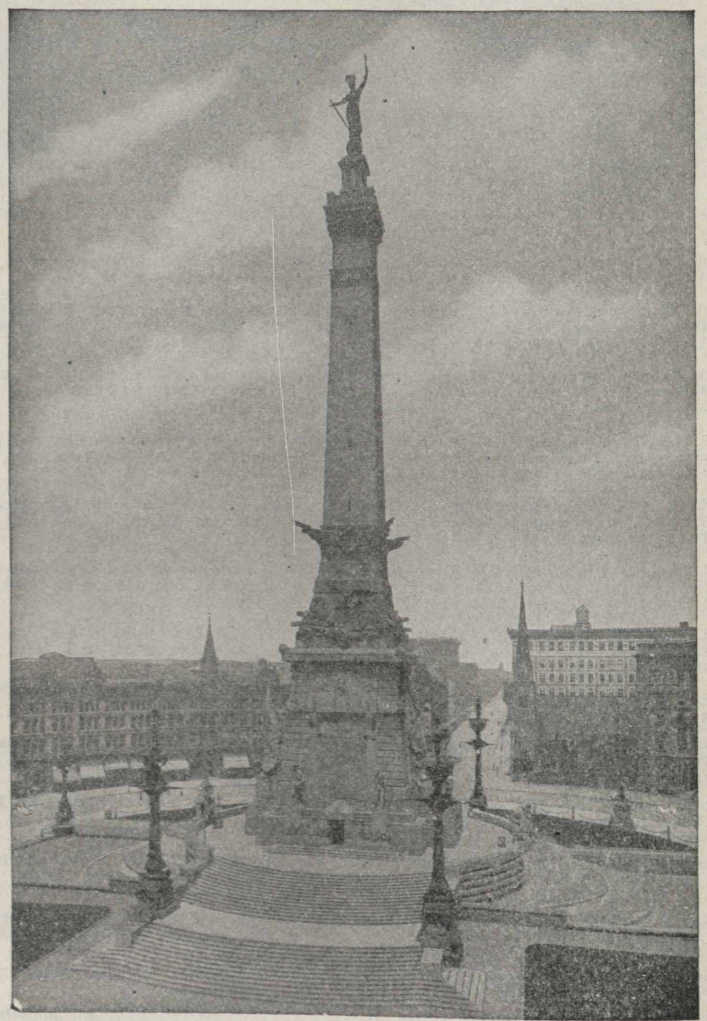
A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

1. The intersection of Meridian and Washington Streets is admittedly the most important corner in the United States to the motoring public. Meridian Street is the urban trunk line of the heaviest traveled north and south highways, while Washington Street is merely the Indianapolis name for the National Road. The confluence is known as "The Cross-roads of America" and it forms an ideal spot from which to begin an interesting tour of the city.

The chief point of interest within the Circle is:



THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

6. Going north on Meridian Street the gray stone structure to the left at the corner of Ohio Street is the old library, now the business branch of the Public Library. Diagonally across the street is:

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

9. UNIVERSITY PARK is across New York Street immediately north of the Postoffice. One of the most charming sculptural pieces in the middle west, the "Fountain of Youth," by A. Sterling Calder, is here.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

18. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

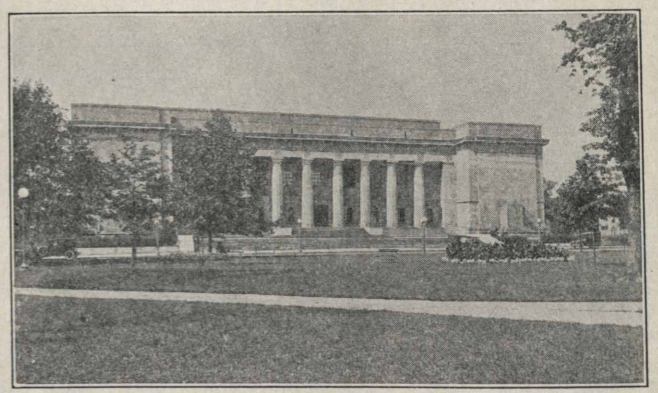
15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

16. AMERICAN LEGION HEADQUARTERS—A part of the Memorial Plaza plan, the building at St. Clair and Meridian Streets in the small park across from the Elks Club now houses the national offices of the American Legion.

17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

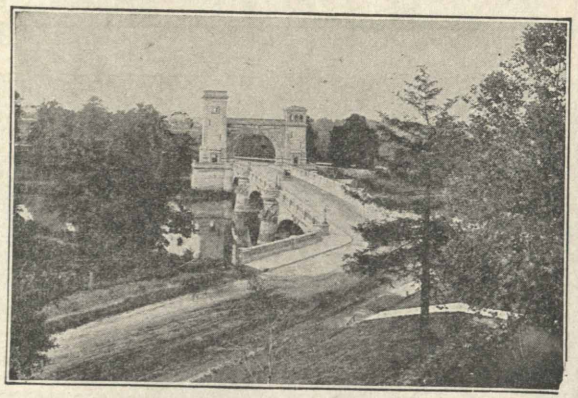
22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

24. FALL CREEK—A boulevard follows this winding, bridge-spanned waterway from the point at which it enters the city on the northeast until the creek merges at last into White River. Crossing the bridge, and turning to the right from Meridian Street, the visitor will find himself on one of the most ideally beautiful drives imaginable.



THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

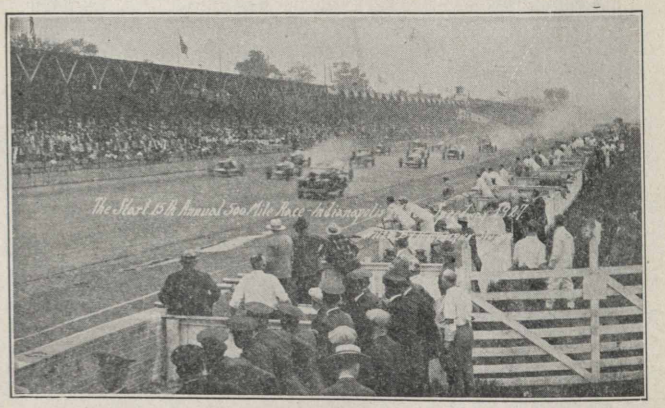
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

33. THE INDIANA STATE CAPITOL—This imposing limestone structure houses the governmental machinery of the state. Here the governor has his office, and here the legislature holds its sessions.

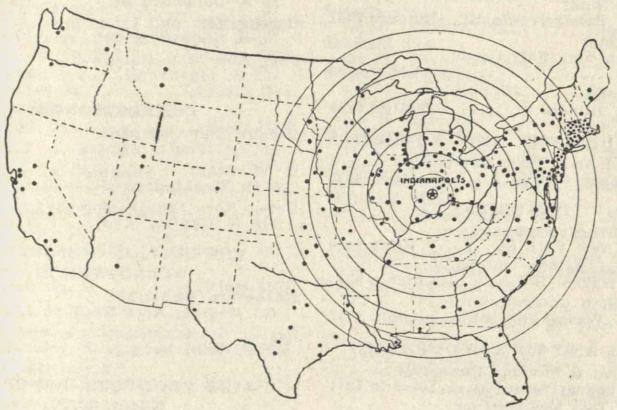
One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

ACCESSIBLE INDIANAPOLIS

With more than 85 per cent of the entire population of the nation within thirty hours' ride of Indianapolis, as shown on the accompanying map, the city's accessibility is easily an attractive feature. The circles on the map are placed at each 100-mile radius from the city, the dots representing cities of 30,000 population and over. (The center of population of the United States has been established by the government within 60 miles from Indianapolis.)



Indianapolis is especially accessible to those who travel by motor car. Located on several leading national highways, with good, hard surfaced roads radiating in every direction. Travel distances from important cities are as follows:

	Miles		Miles
Albany, New York	830	Madison, Wisconsin	363
Atlanta, Georgia	605	Miami, Florida	1,336

We Need Veterinarians

It is reported from the Kansas Agricultural College that the enrollment in the veterinary courses this year is higher than for many years back. This is encouraging, for a real and serious shortage of competent veterinarians is imminent in the near future unless more young men of the right kind do decide to fit themselves for the practice of veterinary medicine.

Most people do not realize the importance of the veterinarian in maintaining the health and well-being of our farm animals, and still less do they realize how much the health of the human race depends on the health of the beasts. Rabies, anthrax and glanders, to say nothing of tuberculosis, are all terrible diseases that are easily communicated to man from the lower animals.

While it is a fact that the spread of knowledge of sanitation and animal hygiene among the farmers will do much to head off animal disease, nevertheless, it is still true that the brunt of the battle must be borne by the men who are trained specifically for the task—in other words the veterinarians. The lack of trained men opens the way for the quack and the vender of nostrums. As the country grows older and the number of animals increases, the problem of disease and parasite control becomes more serious—that is a plain fact that cannot be controverted. Twenty-five years from now we will consider ourselves fortunate if we have a sufficient force of veterinarians adequately trained for the task that will be theirs.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

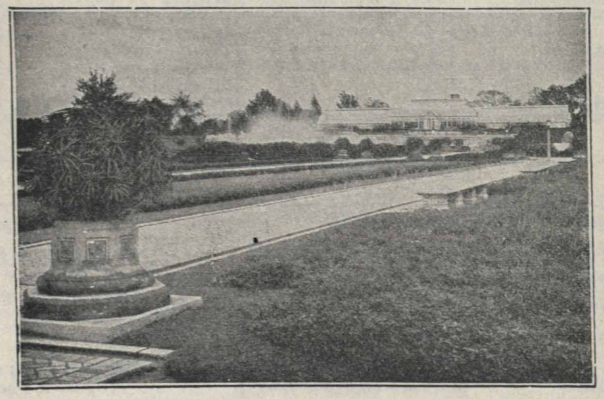
Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.



Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

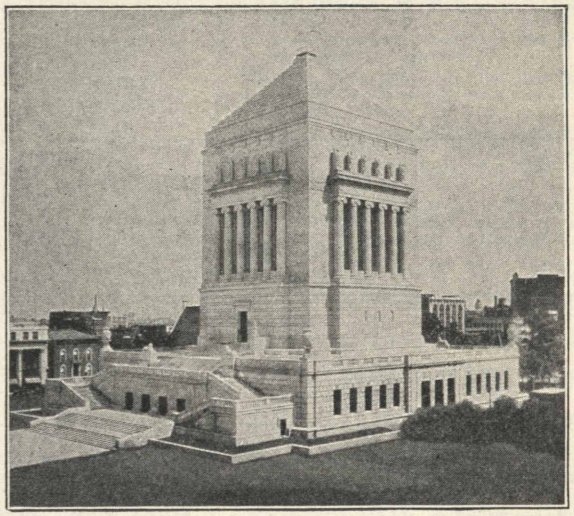
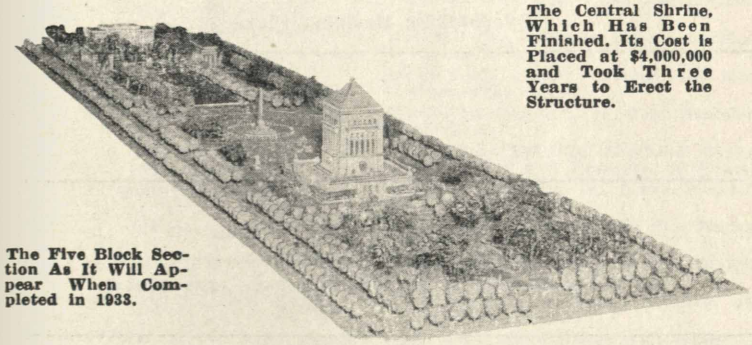
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.





The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.

The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

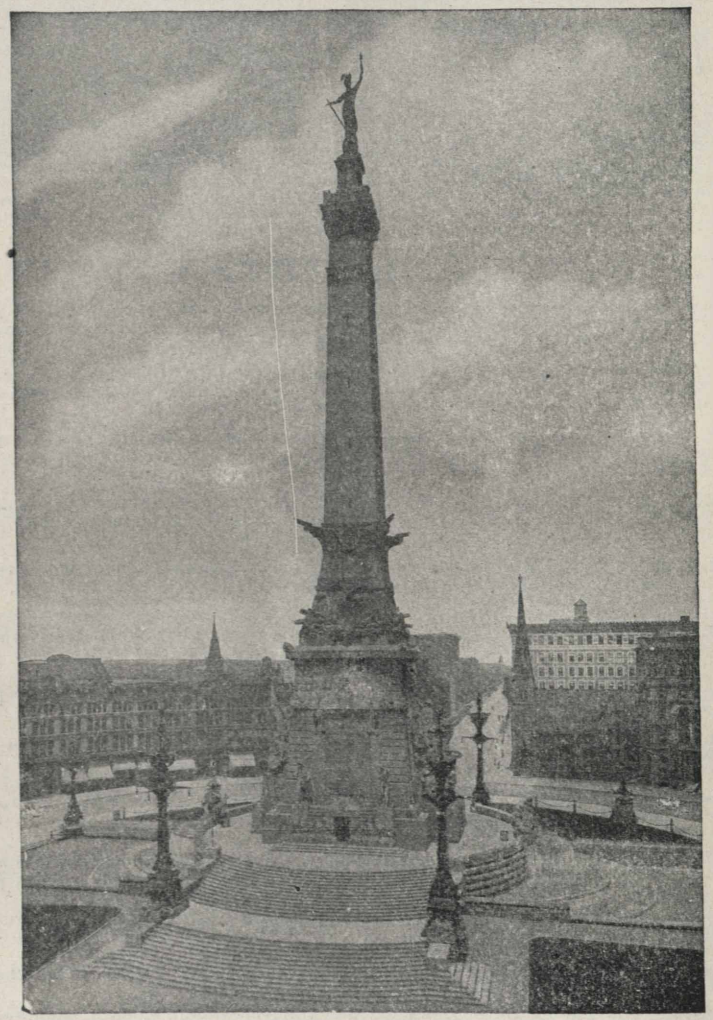
The chief point of interest within the Circle is:



THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

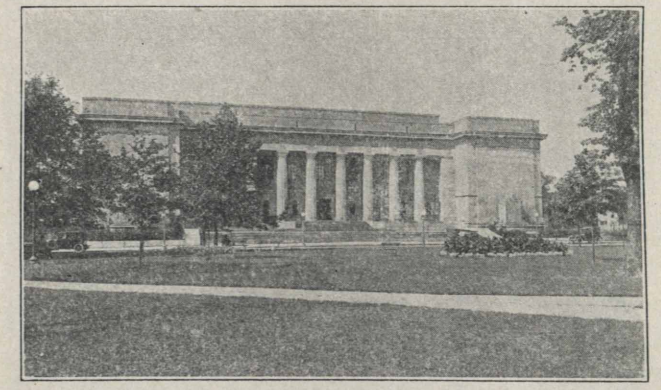
One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

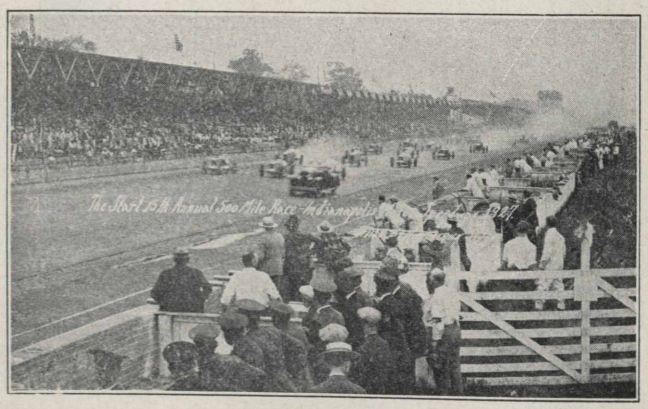
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

33. THE INDIANA STATE CAPITOL—This imposing limestone structure houses the governmental machinery of the state. Here the governor has his office, and here the legislature holds its sessions.

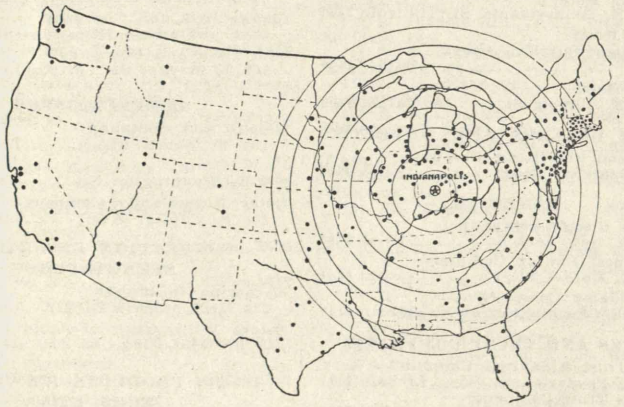
One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

ACCESSIBLE INDIANAPOLIS

With more than 85 per cent of the entire population of the nation within thirty hours' ride of Indianapolis, as shown on the accompanying map, the city's accessibility is easily an attractive feature. The circles on the map are placed at each 100-mile radius from the city, the dots representing cities of 30,000 population and over. (The center of population of the United States has been established by the government within 60 miles from Indianapolis.)



Indianapolis is especially accessible to those who travel by motor car. Located on several leading national highways, with good, hard surfaced roads radiating in every direction. Travel distances from important cities are as follows:

Welcome to the Architects

Indianapolis greets the Architects. The Architects of Indiana are justified in the pride which they take in their Capital City. Possessed of a city plan which in its fundamentals is a pattern for other communities; having a Plaza which in its early development promises a conception of real grandeur; and claiming some of the loveliest bits of architecture in the country, Indianapolis holds within its limits a real welcome to the architect.

Indianapolis also boasts of a building which is devoted entirely to the Building Industry. The Architects' and Builders' Building has within its confines, a complete building material exhibit; the offices of some fifteen architectural firms; contractors offices; and individual offices of material dealers with exceptional displays. An architect could spend a profitable week in this building alone. It is a perpetual bit of promotional publicity for the profession.

More particularly, however, Indianapolis boasts of its cordial Hoosier hospitality. Its clubs, and its theatre, and its human contacts wherever you find them, are such as to warm your hearts to the genial welcome which awaits the guest in our "House." Indianapolis welcomes you.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

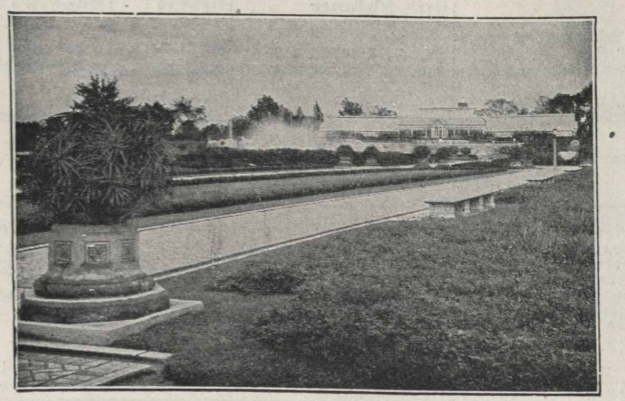
Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.



Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

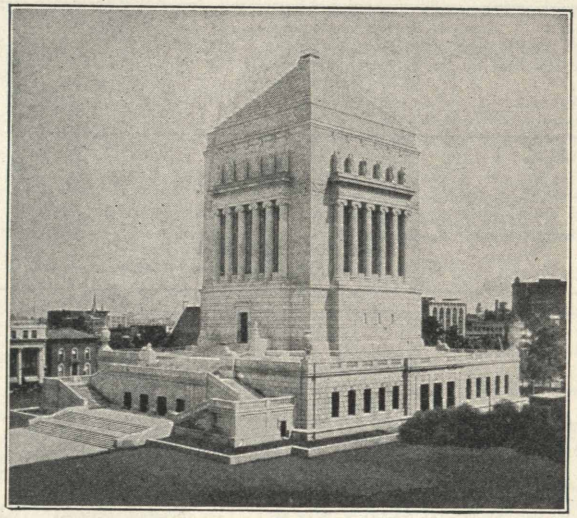
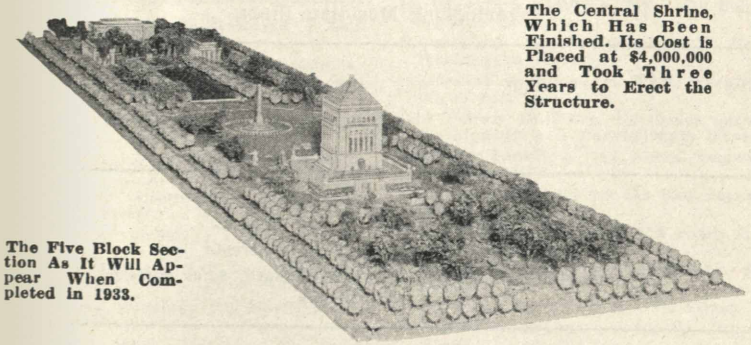
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

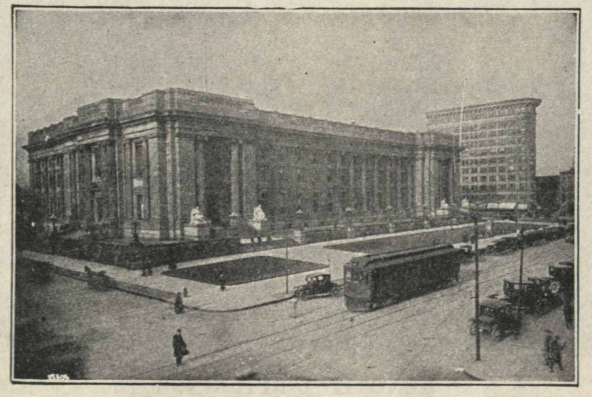
Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

6. Going north on Meridian Street the gray stone structure to the left at the corner of Ohio Street is the old library, now the business branch of the Public Library. Diagonally across the street is:



7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

9. UNIVERSITY PARK is across New York Street immediately north of the Postoffice. One of the most charming sculptural pieces in the middle west, the "Fountain of Youth," by A. Sterling Calder, is here.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

18. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

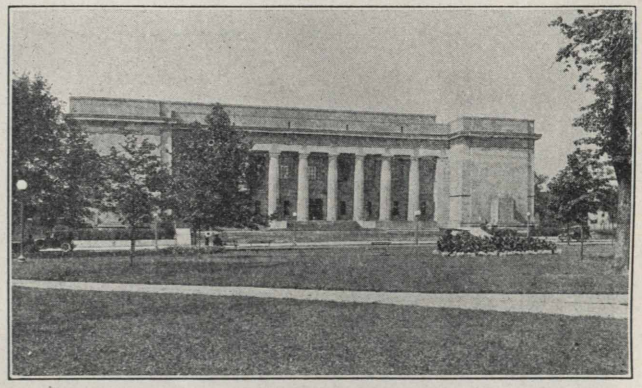
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

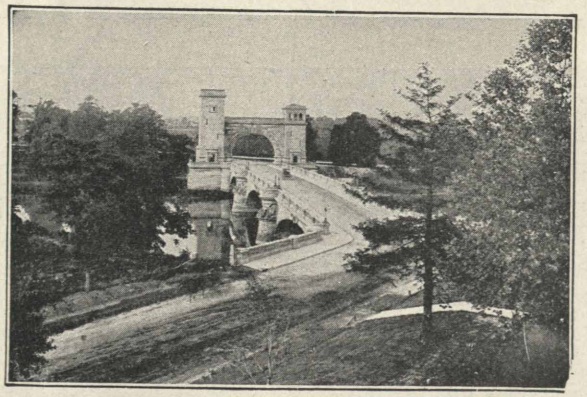
22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

24. FALL CREEK—A boulevard follows this winding, bridge-spanned waterway from the point at which it enters the city on the northeast until the creek merges at last into White River. Crossing the bridge, and turning to the right from Meridian Street, the visitor will find himself on one of the most ideally beautiful drives imaginable.



THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

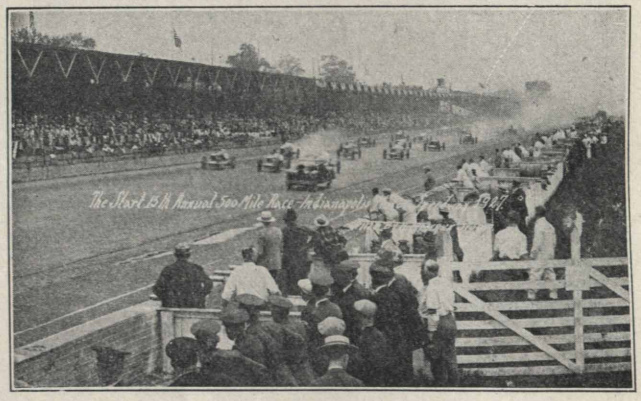
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

33. THE INDIANA STATE CAPITOL—This imposing limestone structure houses the governmental machinery of the state. Here the governor has his office, and here the legislature holds its sessions.

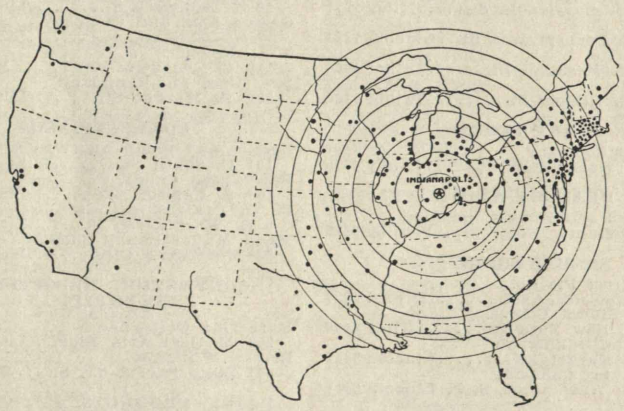
One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

ACCESSIBLE INDIANAPOLIS

With more than 85 per cent of the entire population of the nation within thirty hours' ride of Indianapolis, as shown on the accompanying map, the city's accessibility is easily an attractive feature. The circles on the map are placed at each 100-mile radius from the city, the dots representing cities of 30,000 population and over. (The center of population of the United States has been established by the government within 60 miles from Indianapolis.)



Indianapolis is especially accessible to those who travel by motor car. Located on several leading national highways, with good, hard surfaced roads radiating in every direction. Travel distances from important cities are as follows:

SECOND FEBRUARY ISSUE, 1930

The Mother of Authors

Indiana turns its attention in February to the birth anniversaries of two great men—Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

To the former it can lay part claim. Yet, it need not quibble too jealously over this honor, for in its own annals are the lives of men who have attained distinction in literature and statesmanship to a degree that has brought great honor to the commonwealth.

Indiana is prone to mention offhand the names of men like James Whitcomb Riley in speaking of its literary achievements, and to forget the works of scores of others who perhaps have not confined themselves as closely to the confines of the state as did Riley.

Meredith Nicholson, Booth Tarkington and George Ade also come to the mind instantly as products of which Hoosierdom may boast. It is in literature chiefly that these men achieved their fame. But the literary works of Indiana have come also from the pens of men who are remembered not only as writers, but as soldiers and statesmen. There is General Lew Wallace, author of Ben Hur, for example.

As early as 1866 a Hoosier published a book. He was D. P. Kidder, who wrote "Brazil and Brazilians," a book said to be an authority on certain points. In 1888, the Honorable Hugh McCulloch, twice secretary of the treasury, published "Men and Measures of a Half Century."

Robert Dale Owen, a son of the leader in the New Harmony community, wrote "Hints on Public Architecture," and the "Wrong of Slavery," two books on occult themes which made him widely known. John B. Dillon wrote a "History of Indiana" and William H. English wrote "Conquest of the Country Northwest of the Ohio River."

Authorship seems to have been stimulated following the Civil War. From Oliver H. Smith came a volume of political and social reminiscences which still are read avidly. William Dudley Foulke wrote "The Life of Oliver P. Morton." Jacob P. Dunn's two histories of Indiana and Logan Esarey's "History of Indiana" have followed Dunn's works.

Edward Eggleston is nationally known as the author in 1877 of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" and other books. George Cary Eggleston, brother of Edward, became a New York newspaper man and wrote a number of children's books.

Caroline Brown Krout, of Crawfordsville, wrote "Knights in Fustian," an historical novel, and other books, and Maurice Thompson began to publish essays, sketches, novels and poems which led up to his fame in 1900 as the author of "Alice of Old Vincennes." Charles Major also scored about this time with "When Knighthood was in Flower."

Sarah T. Bolton, long a resident of Indianapolis, and Mrs. D. M. Jordan were outstanding of the early poets. Evaleen Stein created "exquisite verse." William Vaughn Moody is known as a classical, intellectual poet and dramatist of American life.

George Ade ranks high among the present day writers. And there are David Graham Phillips, Robert Underwood Johnson, Albert E. Wiggam, Theodore Dreiser, Elmer Davis, Claude G. Bowers and George Barr McCutcheon.

Albert J. Beveridge needs no explanations. Neither does Thomas R. Marshall.

It is a long list. It represents an array of traditions that the state cannot afford to allow grow dim. Probably no state in the Union can show a record that is comparable.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

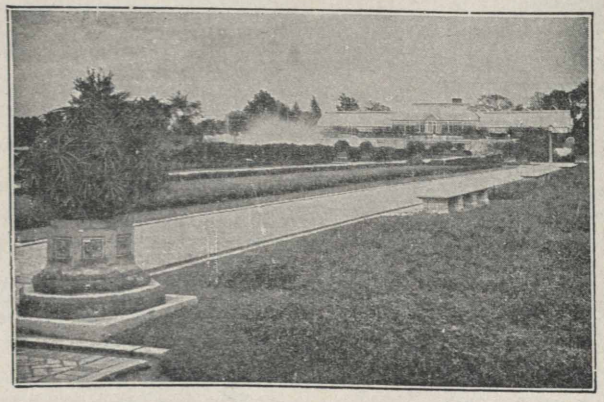
Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.



Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

A casual visitor to a city forms his impressions largely by the hotel which comprises his home while there. No greater testimony could be accorded Indianapolis hotels than that guests of the city invariably carry away pleasant recollections and a desire to return.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

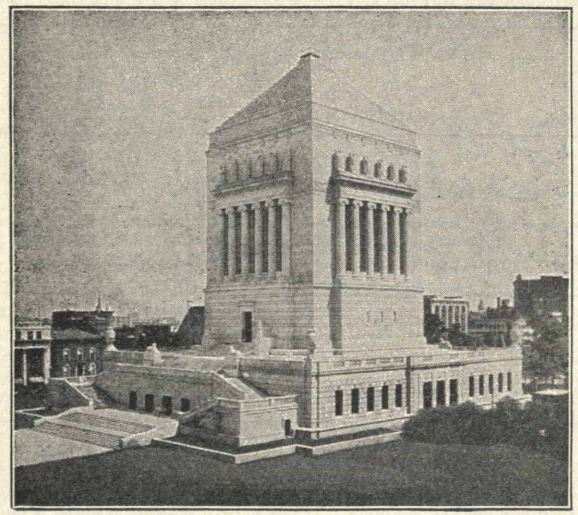
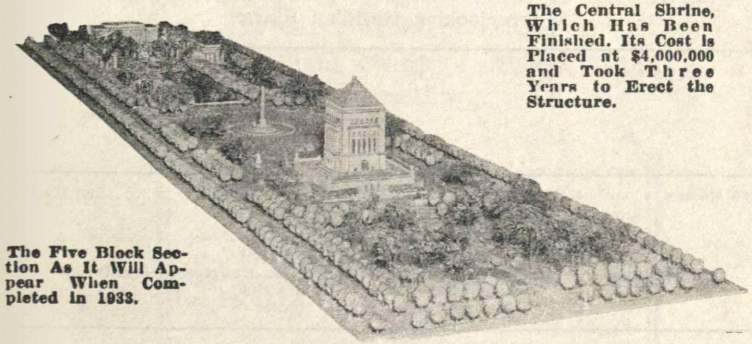
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS HAS FINE HOTELS

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

If *Diogenes Came to Indianapolis

*Diogenes—Ancient Greek Philosopher, remembered for his fruitless search for an honest man.

Diogenes wouldn't have to weed out so very many impossible prospects were he to institute a search for an honest business man in Indianapolis today.

There are characteristics which indicate to anyone that here are men who may be trusted.

The accuracy and truth of Indianapolis advertising is no coincidence.

Trade where you know you will be fairly treated, and before entering into any investment transaction with any firm with whom you are unfamiliar, or regarding whom you can learn little or nothing, consult the Better Business Bureau for information.

Reputable firms welcome investigation. Protection costs you nothing.

The appearance of this Public Service Message in these columns is evidence that this publication subscribes whole-heartedly to the principles of the Better Business Bureau, and co-operates with the Bureau in protecting you . . . even to the extent of refusing to accept the advertising of firms whose advertising and sales policies are proved to be contrary to public interest.

HOW TO GET ABOUT THE CITY

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

1. The intersection of Meridian and Washington Streets is admittedly the most important corner in the United States to the motoring public. Meridian Street is the urban trunk line of the heaviest traveled north and south highways, while Washington Street is merely the Indianapolis name for the National Road. The confluence is known as "The Cross-roads of America" and it forms an ideal spot from which to begin an interesting tour of the city.

The chief point of interest within the Circle is:

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

6. Going north on Meridian Street the gray stone structure to the left at the corner of Ohio Street is the old library, now the business branch of the Public Library. Diagonally across the street is:

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

9. UNIVERSITY PARK is across New York Street immediately north of the Postoffice. One of the most charming sculptural pieces in the middle west, the "Fountain of Youth," by A. Sterling Calder, is here.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

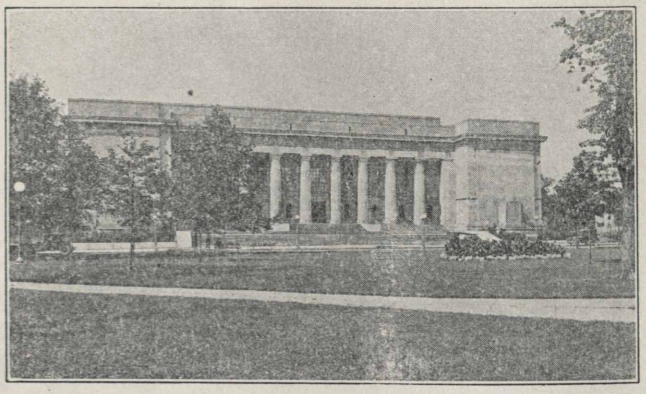
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

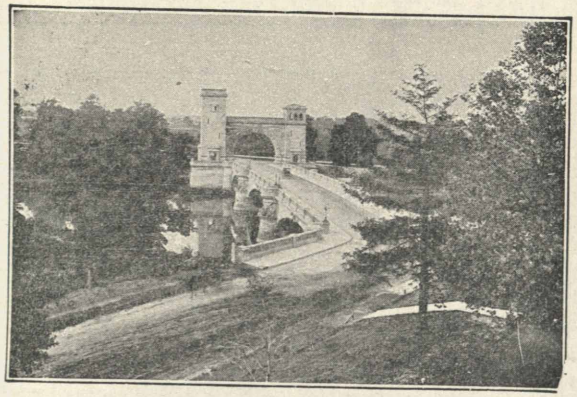
22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

24. FALL CREEK—A boulevard follows this winding, bridge-spanned waterway from the point at which it enters the city on the northeast until the creek merges at last into White River. Crossing the bridge, and turning to the right from Meridian Street, the visitor will find himself on one of the most ideally beautiful drives imaginable.



THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

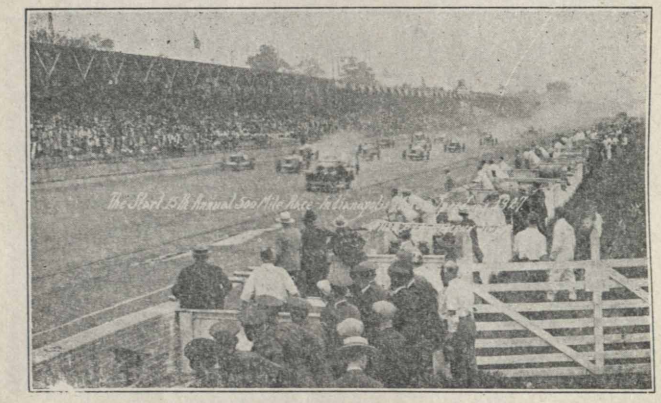
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

33. THE INDIANA STATE CAPITOL—This imposing limestone structure houses the governmental machinery of the state. Here the governor has his office, and here the legislature holds its sessions.

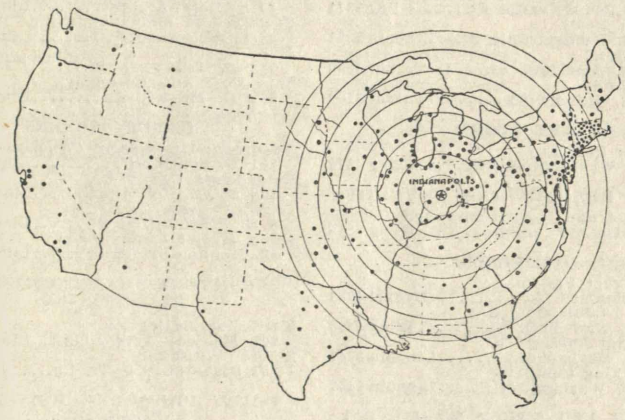
One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

ACCESSIBLE INDIANAPOLIS

With more than 85 per cent of the entire population of the nation within thirty hours' ride of Indianapolis, as shown on the accompanying map, the city's accessibility is easily an attractive feature. The circles on the map are placed at each 100-mile radius from the city, the dots representing cities of 30,000 population and over. (The center of population of the United States has been established by the government within 60 miles from Indianapolis.)



Indianapolis is especially accessible to those who travel by motor car. Located on several leading national highways, with good, hard surfaced roads radiating in every direction. Travel distances from important cities are as follows:

THE FIFTH ANNUAL NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

In recent years some of our larger railroad systems of the United States have come to recognize the value of physical recreation and athletic competition as a means of promoting health, happiness and sociability among their employees.

The New York Central Lines with their 167,000 employees have been a leader in this movement and the annual athletic tournaments in baseball, baseketball, track and field, held under the auspices of the New York Central Lines Athletic Associations, where champions in the respective activities are set up, are among the most important events in the lives of the membership of the great railroad family.

Indianapolis, home of 6,208 employees of the Big Four Railroad, is indeed proud to entertain the Fifth Annual New York Central Lines championship basketball tournament in the Butler University field house, March 7 and 8.

To this tournament will come the champion girl and boy teams of each of the respective railroads comprising the New York Central system, to compete in a two-day struggle for the title of Lines Champions. Sectional tournaments have already been held by the local athletic associations of the Michigan Central, N. Y. C. Railroad—Lines east and west, the Indiana Harbor Belt, the Peoria & Eastern, Chicago Junction, Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, N. Y. C. (Ohio Central Lines), and the Big Four Railroad. Their teams are ready for the fray.

Thousands of fans will pour into Indianapolis on special trains from all parts of the country served by the New York Central system. Numerous railroad bands will furnish martial music, cheer leaders will do their stuff, and hearts will beat high with hope that their team will be the one to bring home the President's Trophy—signifying the championship of the New York Central lines.

All Indianapolis extends a true Hoosier welcome, and may the best team win!

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

A casual visitor to a city forms his impressions largely by the hotel which comprises his home while there. No greater testimony could be accorded Indianapolis hotels than that guests of the city invariably carry away pleasant recollections and a desire to return.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

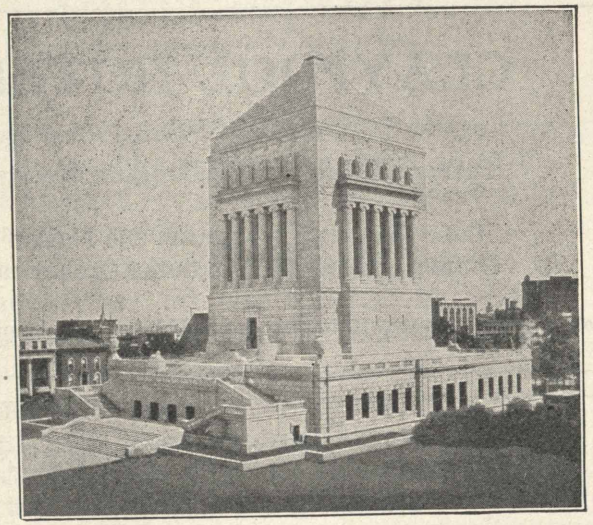
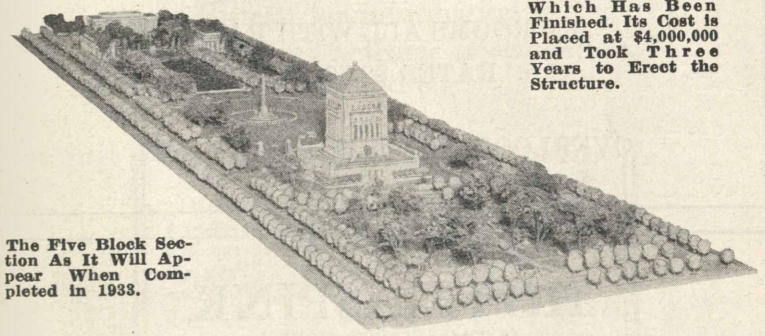
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS HAS FINE HOTELS

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

If *Diogenes Came to Indianapolis

 Diogenes—Ancient Greek Philosopher, remembered for his fruitless search for an honest man.

Diogenes wouldn't have to weed out so very many impossible prospects were he to institute a search for an honest business man in Indianapolis today.

There are characteristics which indicate to anyone that here are men who may be trusted.

The accuracy and truth of Indianapolis advertising is no coincidence.

Trade where you know you will be fairly treated, and before entering into any investment transaction with any firm with whom you are unfamiliar, or regarding whom you can learn little or nothing, consult the Better Business Bureau for information.

Reputable firms welcome investigation. Protection costs you nothing.

The appearance of this Public Service Message in these columns is evidence that this publication subscribes whole-heartedly to the principles of the Better Business Bureau, and co-operates with the Bureau in protecting you . . . even to the extent of refusing to accept the advertising of firms whose advertising and sales policies are proved to be contrary to public interest.

HOW TO GET ABOUT THE CITY

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

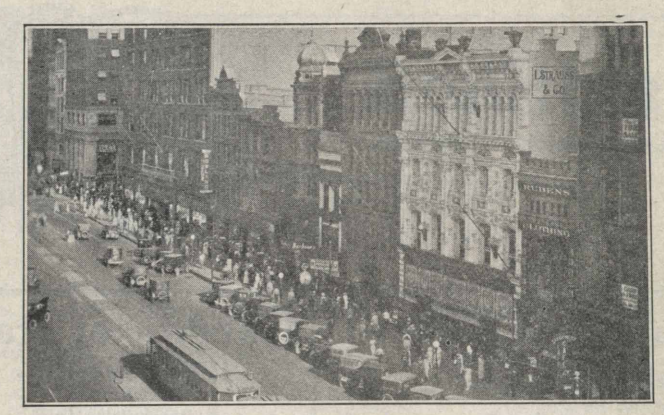
1, Union Station. 2, Traction Terminal Station. 3, Federal Building. 4, Statehouse. 5 Courthouse. 6, City Hall. 7, War Memorial Plaza (Section).

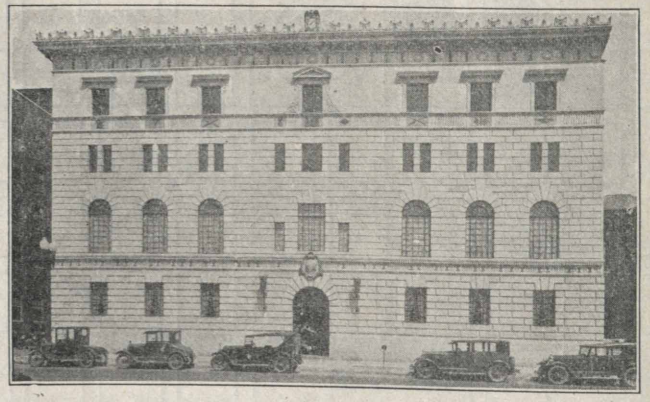


AN AMERICAN CITY

Indianapolis boasts a remarkably high percentage of American-born citizens. It is a delightful, home-loving city of American citizens.

CADLE TABERNACLE

Five minutes' walk from the downtown hotel district; annually houses many large conventions and expositions. It contains 40,000 square feet of floor space or seats 10,000 persons.



ARMORY

A new United States Armory, just completed at a cost of $425,000, offers splendid facilities for a large convention. Located at 721 North Pennsylvania Street.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

1. The intersection of Meridian and Washington Streets is admittedly the most important corner in the United States to the motoring public. Meridian Street is the urban trunk line of the heaviest traveled north and south highways, while Washington Street is merely the Indianapolis name for the National Road. The confluence is known as "The Cross-roads of America" and it forms an ideal spot from which to begin an interesting tour of the city.

The chief point of interest within the Circle is:

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

6. Going north on Meridian Street the gray stone structure to the left at the corner of Ohio Street is the old library, now the business branch of the Public Library. Diagonally across the street is:

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

9. UNIVERSITY PARK is across New York Street immediately north of the Postoffice. One of the most charming sculptural pieces in the middle west, the "Fountain of Youth," by A. Sterling Calder, is here.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

18. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

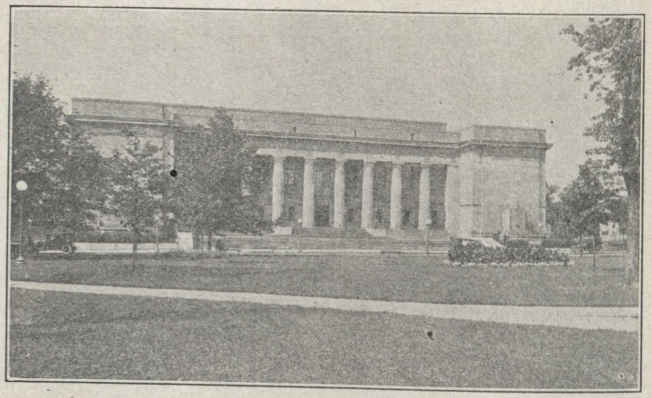
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

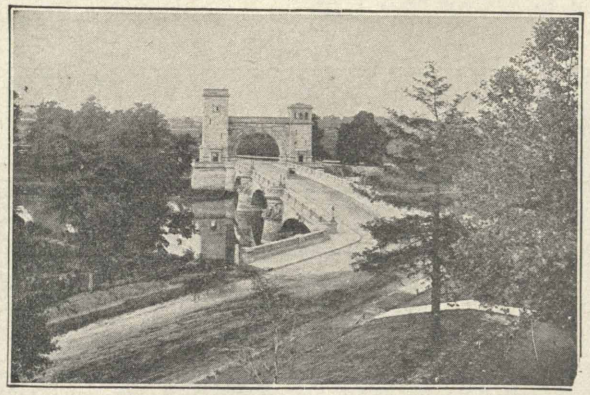
22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

24. FALL CREEK—A boulevard follows this winding, bridge-spanned waterway from the point at which it enters the city on the northeast until the creek merges at last into White River. Crossing the bridge, and turning to the right from Meridian Street, the visitor will find himself on one of the most ideally beautiful drives imaginable.



THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

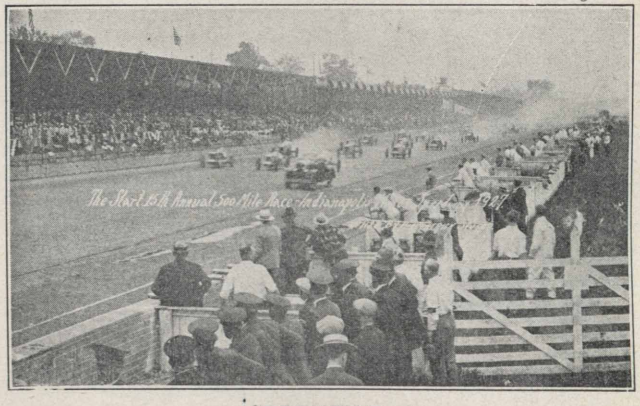
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

33. THE INDIANA STATE CAPITOL—This imposing limestone structure houses the governmental machinery of the state. Here the governor has his office, and here the legislature holds its sessions.

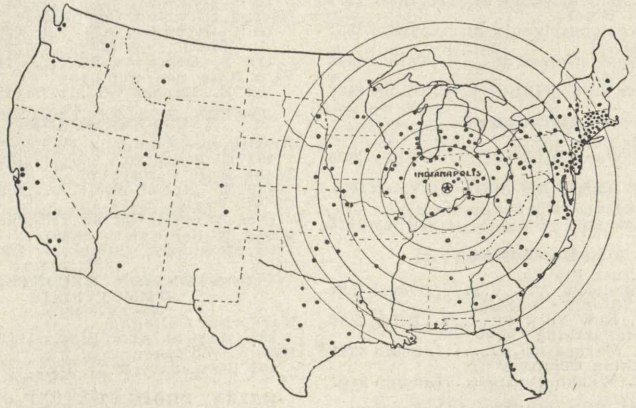
One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

ACCESSIBLE INDIANAPOLIS

With more than 85 per cent of the entire population of the nation within thirty hours' ride of Indianapolis, as shown on the accompanying map, the city's accessibility is easily an attractive feature. The circles on the map are placed at each 100-mile radius from the city, the dots representing cities of 30,000 population and over. (The center of population of the United States has been established by the government within 60 miles from Indianapolis.)



Indianapolis is especially accessible to those who travel by motor car. Located on several leading national highways, with good, hard surfaced roads radiating in every direction. Travel distances from important cities are as follows:

SECOND MARCH ISSUE, 1930

INDIANA REXALL DEALERS

Rexall dealers in all parts of Indiana will come to Indianapolis March 18 and 19 to educate themselves thoroughly in the latest developments not only in the field of their own merchandise, but in that of their competitors.

That is the prime motive of the annual meeting of the Indiana Rexall Club. Probably five hundred members will be in attendance. Their contribution to the meeting will be equivalent to that of the United Drug Company. The change in sales methods and sales conditions often is even more rapid than the changes in the product for which sales are being created.

A program which will be invaluable to all members of the Rexall Club has been prepared, largely through the work of the Indianapolis Rexall Club, which is host to the convention. The convention will open at the Claypool Hotel at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, March 18. G. A. Triplett of Osgood, state president, will call the meeting to order. Mr. Wade will extend a welcome and F. Russell Simpson of Boston, assistant general sales manager of the United Drug Company, will bring a word from the home office. H. B. Storm, manager of the Chicago branch, Kiefer Elliott of Sheridan, first vice-president of the Indiana club; George A. Wilson, secretary of the International Association of Rexall Clubs; Walter Ehrhardt of Fort Wayne, and George C. Frolich of Boston, all will speak.

Following a business session Tuesday afternoon, addresses will be given by Walter E. Jolly of Knightstown, international president; J. H. Crouch, general manager of Liggett stores in Indiana, Michigan and Ohio; and J. F. Agnew, United Drug Company sales director for Kentucky, Tennessee, and part of Virginia and Indiana.

Speakers Wednesday morning will be R. J. Gelinas, United

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

Greens fee, for all courses, 50 cents, except Sarah Shank, which is 25 cents.

COUNTRY CLUBS

Avalon Country Club—Millersville Road, nine and one-half miles northeast of city.

Broadmoor Country Club—West Fifty-fourth Street.

Highland Golf and Country Club—Fifty-fourth and Whithead Streets.

Meridian Hills Country Club—Spring Mill Road.

Woodstock Club—Northwestern Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street.

Drug Company sales manager for Western New York, Michigan and part of Indiana; Arthur T. Connelly of Boston, sales manager of the candy department; and H. B. Storm. The closing session in the afternoon will be a business program and speeches by F. Russell Simpson, and George C. Frolich. A theater party Tuesday night and the annual banquet Wednesday night will be entertainment features.

There should be unprecedented attendance at the entire convention. The local Rexall Club and the city of Indianapolis welcome members to this meeting.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

A casual visitor to a city forms his impressions largely by the hotel which comprises his home while there. No greater testimony could be accorded Indianapolis hotels than that guests of the city invariably carry away pleasant recollections and a desire to return.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

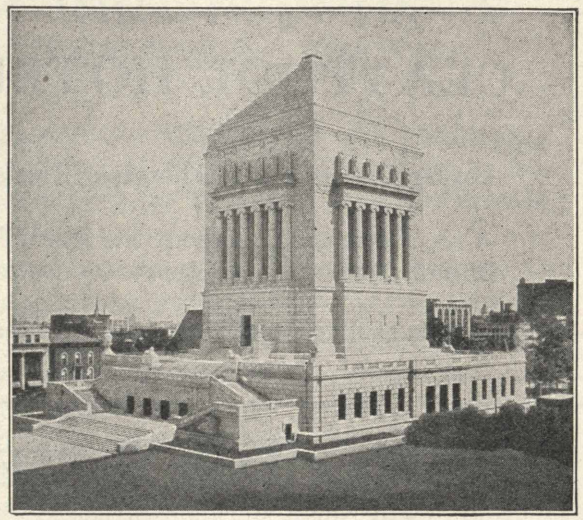
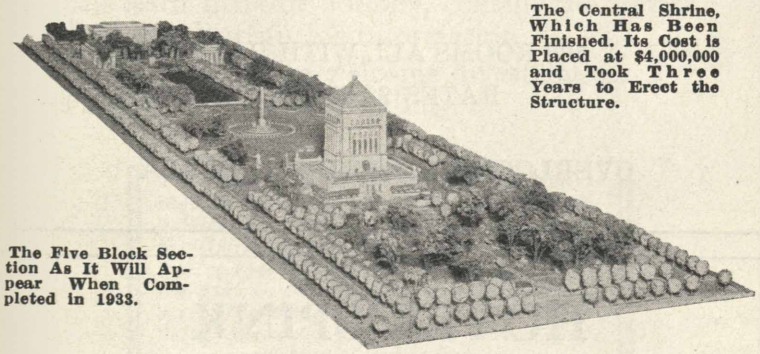
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS HAS FINE HOTELS

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

If *Diogenes Came to Indianapolis

 Diogenes—Ancient Greek Philosopher, remembered for his fruitless search for an honest man.

Diogenes wouldn't have to weed out so very many impossible prospects were he to institute a search for an honest business man in Indianapolis today.

There are characteristics which indicate to anyone that here are men who may be trusted.

The accuracy and truth of Indianapolis advertising is no coincidence.

Trade where you know you will be fairly treated, and before entering into any investment transaction with any firm with whom you are unfamiliar, or regarding whom you can learn little or nothing, consult the Better Business Bureau for information.

Reputable firms welcome investigation. Protection costs you nothing.

The appearance of this Public Service Message in these columns is evidence that this publication subscribes whole-heartedly to the principles of the Better Business Bureau, and co-operates with the Bureau in protecting you . . . even to the extent of refusing to accept the advertising of firms whose advertising and sales policies are proved to be contrary to public interest.

HOW TO GET ABOUT THE CITY

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

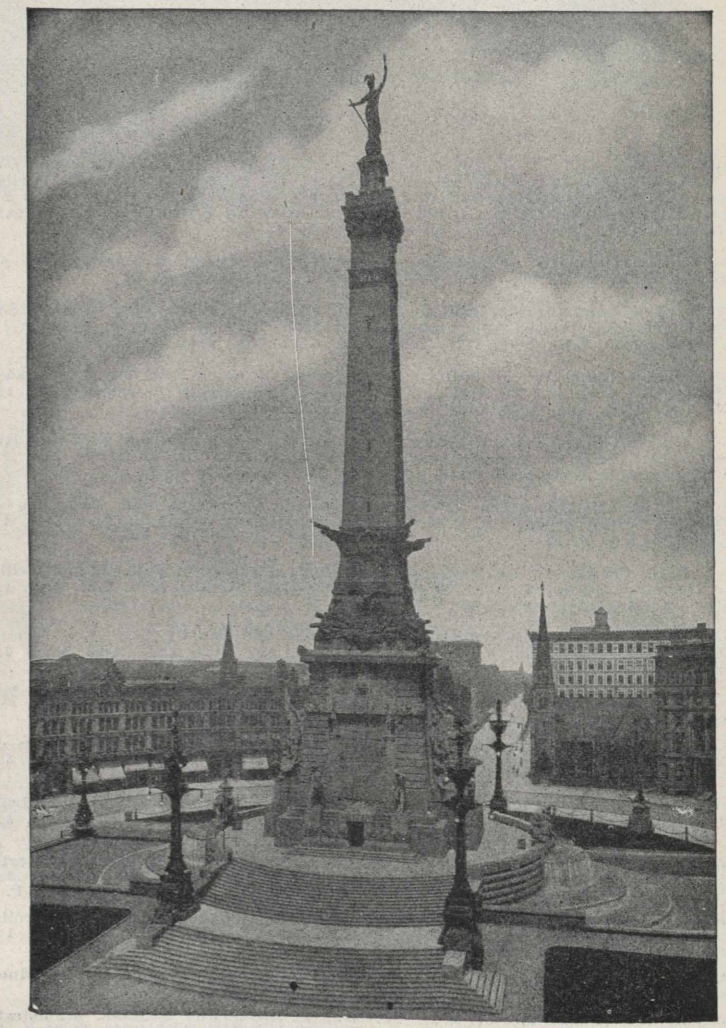
A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

1. The intersection of Meridian and Washington Streets is admittedly the most important corner in the United States to the motoring public. Meridian Street is the urban trunk line of the heaviest traveled north and south highways, while Washington Street is merely the Indianapolis name for the National Road. The confluence is known as "The Cross-roads of America" and it forms an ideal spot from which to begin an interesting tour of the city.

The chief point of interest within the Circle is:



THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

6. Going north on Meridian Street the gray stone structure to the left at the corner of Ohio Street is the old library, now the business branch of the Public Library. Diagonally across the street is:

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

9. UNIVERSITY PARK is across New York Street immediately north of the Postoffice. One of the most charming sculptural pieces in the middle west, the "Fountain of Youth," by A. Sterling Calder, is here.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

18. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

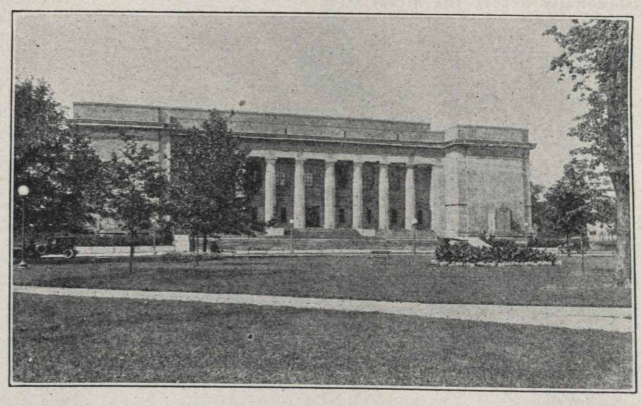
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

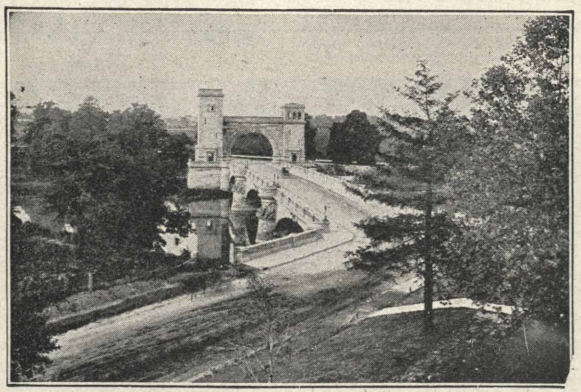
22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

24. FALL CREEK—A boulevard follows this winding, bridge-spanned waterway from the point at which it enters the city on the northeast until the creek merges at last into White River. Crossing the bridge, and turning to the right from Meridian Street, the visitor will find himself on one of the most ideally beautiful drives imaginable.



THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

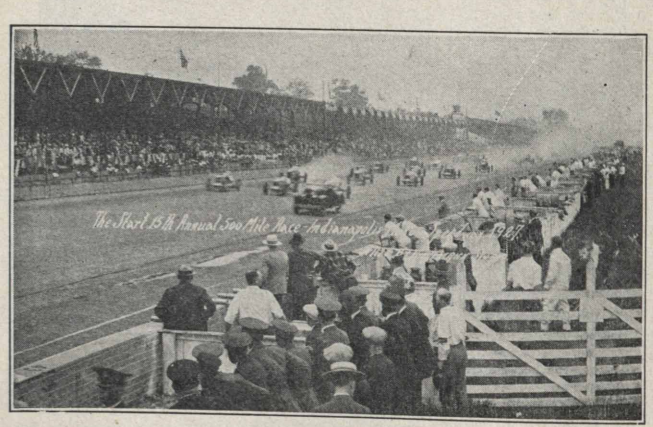
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

33. THE INDIANA STATE CAPITOL—This imposing limestone structure houses the governmental machinery of the state. Here the governor has his office, and here the legislature holds its sessions.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

Ninth Realtors' Home Complete Exposition

Visitors in Indianapolis the week of April 5 to 12, will have the opportunity of visiting the nationally known Realtors' Home Show, conducted by the Indianapolis Real Estate Board, to be held in the Manufacturers' Building at the State Fairgrounds. This exposition featuring a full size story and a half, Early American type home, plus approximately 150 booths displaying commodities and inventions that tend to make the modern home the last word in comfort, has won the favorable attention of visitors from all parts of the United States, and is listed as an event of national importance in magazines carrying the dates of important meetings and conventions. It is one of the few home shows, so honored.

The story-and-a-half dwelling will be erected by the Indianapolis Home Builders' Association and will be known as the Arkansas Soft Pine home. Following the show it will be dismantled and rebuilt on a lot in a residential district by the Builders' Association.

The home will be built of pine and stone, with pine paneling covering the walls of the living and dining rooms, from floor to ceiling. The general utility of pine, both in exterior and interior construction will be demonstrated in the completed home, as well as the effectiveness of colored sandstone on the outside walls.

According to members of the Realtors' committee in charge of the Home Show, the extensive paneling in the living and dining rooms will be one of the unusual features of the home and will undoubtedly find favor among prospective home buyers and builders.

The displays on exhibit, bring together under one roof, an array of house furnishings and appliances that lend great significance to the name of—Home Complete Exposition. Not only are the most modern trend in furniture and decorative supplies displayed, but all the sundries that make the modern home an extremely livable place are included. Some informative booths feature the legal side of home ownership and contain insurance, title, and abstract information, while others show the manner in which the prospective owner may put his home on a firm financial basis.

One of the most outstanding displays at the Home Show is formed from the hundreds of miniature model homes that are pasted and tacked together by the children of Indianapolis and Marion county, who have entered the Miniature Model House contest sponsored by the Indianapolis

Real Estate Board. Each year this phase of the Home Show acquires more importance, not only in the amount of interest created among the children, but in importance to school teachers as well, who use the contest as a class project, with full class credit given by some teachers upon the completion of the entries by the students. Many pleasing and ingenious homes are created by the children from a standardized plan furnished by the Real Estate Board, that they arrange according to their own tastes.

By visiting the past eight shows, many patrons have incorporated the ideas, derived from the exposition into the fulfillment of their dreams of the perfect home, plus the satisfaction acquired in viewing an exhibition of the details used in making a composite picture of the greatest of all institutions—the American home.

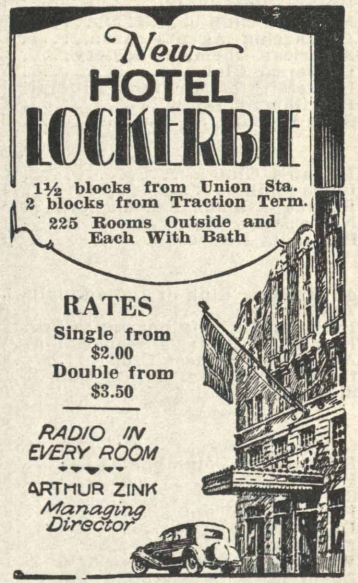
UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

A casual visitor to a city forms his impressions largely by the hotel which comprises his home while there. No greater testimony could be accorded Indianapolis hotels than that guests of the city invariably carry away pleasant recollections and a desire to return.



THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

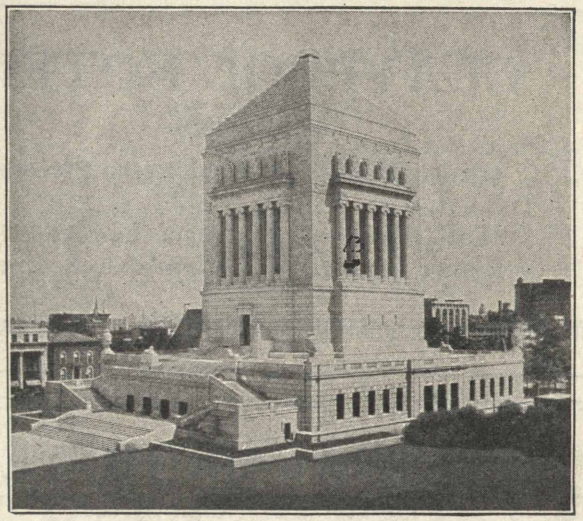
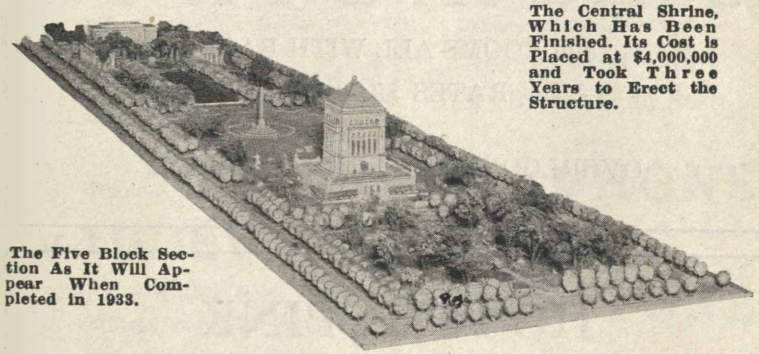
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.





The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.

The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS HAS FINE HOTELS

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

INDIANAPOLIS THEATRES

Listed on This Page

The next few weeks will bring to the Apollo screen some of the best screen attractions available. The tentative bookings include "Song of the West," Warner Brothers' latest all-talking, singing and dancing musical romance, starring John Boles; "Cameo Kirby," Fox Movietone's late romance of the old South with J. Harold Murray and Norma Terris in the leading roles, and "Such Men Are Dangerous," with Warner Baxter in the lead.

The Apollo management maintains a policy of showing only the best in audible screen attractions, and is a pioneer in the talking-picture field.

Those out-of-town visitors that demand the ultimate in screen entertainment will do well to attend the performances given at the Apollo Theatre.

HOW TO GET ABOUT THE CITY

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

1, Union Station. 2, Traction Terminal Station. 3, Federal Building. 4, Statehouse. 5 Courthouse. 6, City Hall. 7, War Memorial Plaza (Section).

Greetings! From I. U. Chorines

Greetings! Say these four little coeds who will remove any idea in your mind that co-education is a failure. They're just a sample of the chorines who will be seen with the 1930 Indiana University Jordan River Revue being produced by students. Left to right are: Peggy Hagedorn, Hammond; Flora Hunter, Indianapolis; Mary Martha Snook, Fort Wayne; and Polly Riggs, Kentland.

The show comes to the B. F. Keith Theatre of Indianapolis Saturday, April 5, for an afternoon and evening performance.

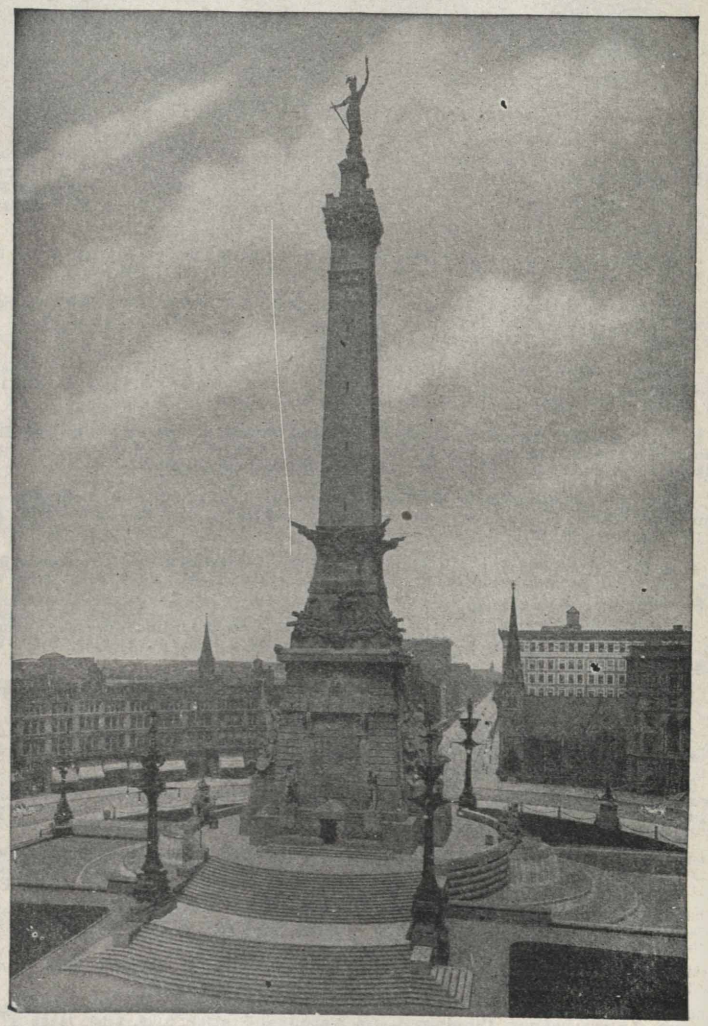
A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

1. The intersection of Meridian and Washington Streets is admittedly the most important corner in the United States to the motoring public. Meridian Street is the urban trunk line of the heaviest traveled north and south highways, while Washington Street is merely the Indianapolis name for the National Road. The confluence is known as "The Cross-roads of America" and it forms an ideal spot from which to begin an interesting tour of the city.

The chief point of interest within the Circle is:



THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

6. Going north on Meridian Street the gray stone structure to the left at the corner of Ohio Street is the old library, now the business branch of the Public Library. Diagonally across the street is:

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

9. UNIVERSITY PARK is across New York Street immediately north of the Postoffice. One of the most charming sculptural pieces in the middle west, the "Fountain of Youth," by A. Sterling Calder, is here.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

18. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

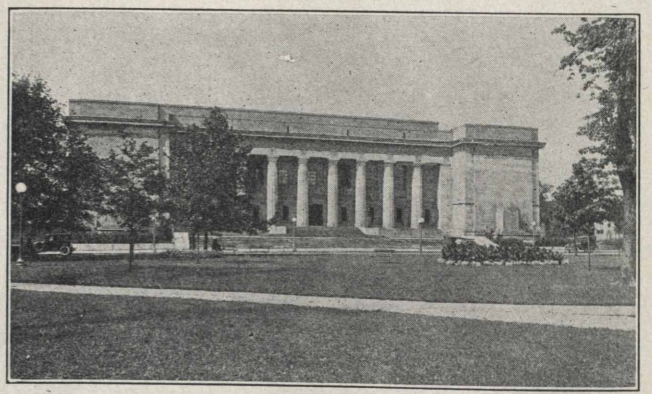
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

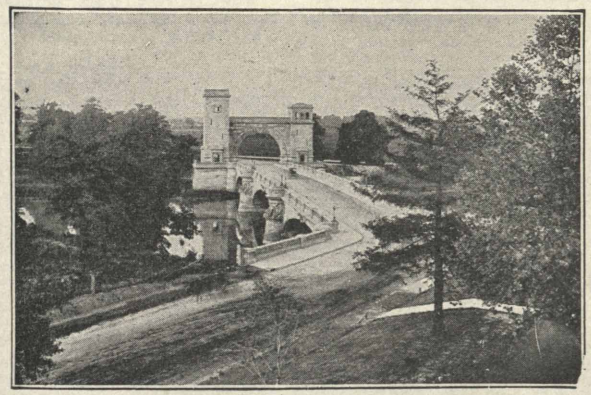
22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

24. FALL CREEK—A boulevard follows this winding, bridge-spanned waterway from the point at which it enters the city on the northeast until the creek merges at last into White River. Crossing the bridge, and turning to the right from Meridian Street, the visitor will find himself on one of the most ideally beautiful drives imaginable.



THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

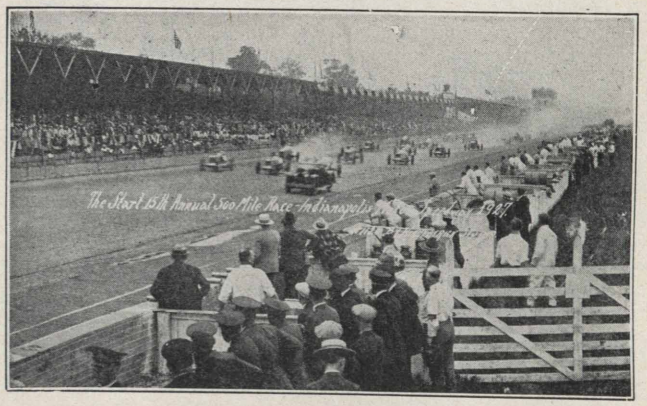
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

33. THE INDIANA STATE CAPITOL—This imposing limestone structure houses the governmental machinery of the state. Here the governor has his office, and here the legislature holds its sessions.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

Scottish Rite Cathedral

Elegance combined with fine artistry awaits the convention visitor who will take the opportunity to pass through the Scottish Rite Cathedral, overlooking the site of the Indiana War Memorial Plaza on North Meridian street.

Exterior beauty reminiscent of Old World architecture has been produced in the structure to make it already famous throughout the world. The cathedral is the dream of the Scottish Rite which has taken many years for realization. The idea, originating with the most modest of ambitions, developed so rapidly that the present magnificent edifice was the inevitable result.

Fred I. Willis, secretary of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, Valley of Indianapolis, has announced that convention visitors will be welcome at 10 o'clock in the morning, and at 2, 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, except Sundays. The Indianapolis Convention Bureau will be glad to arrange visits.

This limited space would not permit a word picture of the interior of the cathedral. Suffice to say that its various departments, its corridors, its library, its auditorium, its ballroom, its chapter rooms and the tower of singing bells are largely memorials on which individual members have showered in a material way their devotion to Masonry. The carillons, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Baxter, are unsurpassed by historic bells in Belgium and Holland or by others in the world.

Among compartments of the building are the Tyler's room, lobby, lounge, library, Lodge of Perfection room, grand stairway, ballroom, auditorium, banquet hall, and the central tower. Each of these compartments would hold the visitor indefinitely. The luxurious appointments have been fitted into a consistent decorative scheme that leaves a permanent impression.

Total cost of the Scottish Rite Cathedral is estimated at more than $3,500,000. Bigness, however, has been a secondary consideration in its construction. Beauty and symmetry to create atmosphere in keeping with traditions of the order has been the aim of the officers who have carried forth the program.

A visit to the cathedral cannot fail to be inspirational to those appreciative of beauty.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

Greens fee, for all courses, 50 cents, except Sarah Shank, which is 25 cents.

COUNTRY CLUBS

Avalon Country Club—Millersville Road, nine and one-half miles northeast of city.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

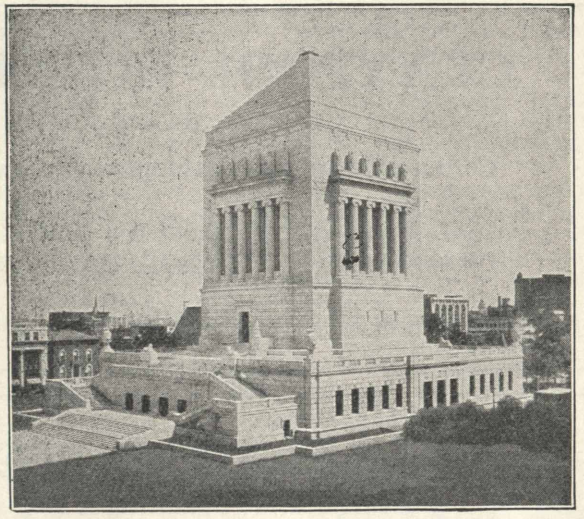
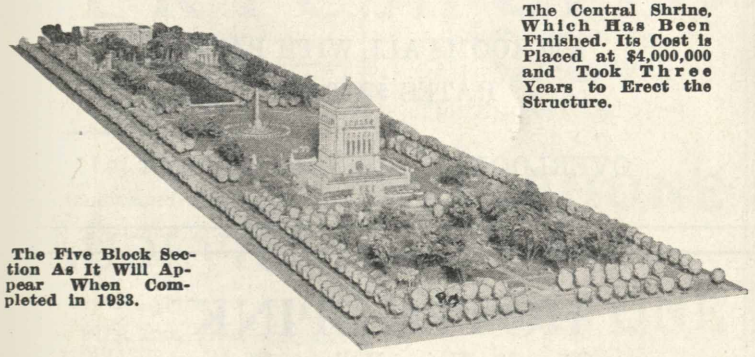
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

Good Shows Always at the Lyric

Convention visitors as well as central Indiana theatregoers are always assured a perfect blend of stage and screen entertainment at the Lyric Theatre. Here only the latest and best of first run Vitaphone and Movietone feature pictures are shown, in addition to the pick of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Vaudeville Headliner acts. There is a complete change of program each Saturday. Popular prices are the rule and performances are continuous daily from 11 to 11.

The Easter week show beginning Saturday, April 19th, is particularly noteworthy. "The Melody Man," an all talking, singing Columbia picture featuring romance, drama, thrills, laughter and music is the screen event. William Collier, Jr., and Marceline Day are the featured players. On the stage is featured Stanley Rollickers, a miniature musical comedy revue; John Steel the noted radio and opera singer; Shafer and Bernice in a comedy revue and Kluting's Entertainers, an aggregation of trained dogs, cats and rabbits booked especially for the kiddies.

The week of April 26th has for its feature Viola Dana, the pert little movie star who with a company of four appears in person with other fine vaudeville acts. "Tiger Rose," an all talking outdoor drama featuring Lupe Velez and Monte Blue will be shown on the screen.

The next few weeks will bring to the Apollo screen some of the best screen attractions available. The tentative bookings include "Song of the West," Warner Brothers' latest all-talking, singing and dancing musical romance, starring John Boles; "Cameo Kirby," Fox Movietone's late romance of the old South with J. Harold Murray and Norma Terris in the leading roles, and "Such Men Are Dangerous," with Warner Baxter in the lead.

The Apollo management maintains a policy of showing only the best in audible screen attractions, and is a pioneer in the talking-picture field.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

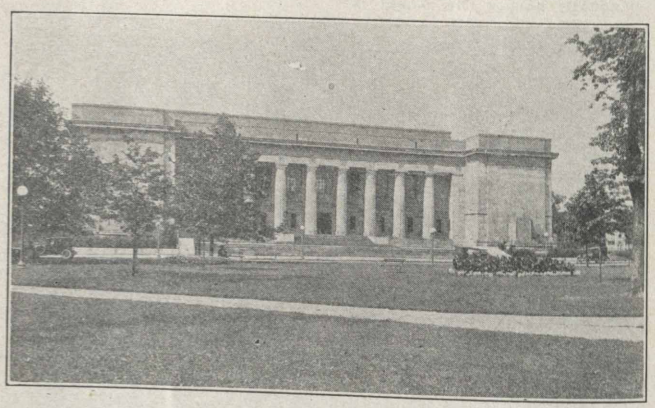
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

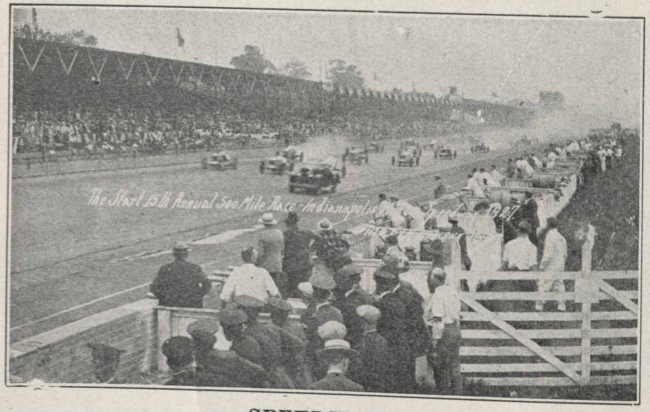
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

Scottish Rite Cathedral

Elegance combined with fine artistry awaits the convention visitor who will take the opportunity to pass through the Scottish Rite Cathedral, overlooking the site of the Indiana War Memorial Plaza on North Meridian street.

Exterior beauty reminiscent of Old World architecture has been produced in the structure to make it already famous throughout the world. The cathedral is the dream of the Scottish Rite which has taken many years for realization. The idea, originating with the most modest of ambitions, developed so rapidly that the present magnificent edifice was the inevitable result.

Fred I. Willis, secretary of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, Valley of Indianapolis, has announced that convention visitors will be welcome at 10 o'clock in the morning, and at 2, 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, except Sundays. The Indianapolis Convention Bureau will be glad to arrange visits.

This limited space would not permit a word picture of the interior of the cathedral. Suffice to say that its various departments, its corridors, its library, its auditorium, its ballroom, its chapter rooms and the tower of singing bells are largely memorials on which individual members have showered in a material way their devotion to Masonry. The carillons, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Baxter, are unsurpassed by historic bells in Belgium and Holland or by others in the world.

Among compartments of the building are the Tyler's room, lobby, lounge, library, Lodge of Perfection room, grand stairway, ballroom, auditorium, banquet hall, and the central tower. Each of these compartments would hold the visitor indefinitely. The luxurious appointments have been fitted into a consistent decorative scheme that leaves a permanent impression.

Total cost of the Scottish Rite Cathedral is estimated at more than $3,500,000. Bigness, however, has been a secondary consideration in its construction. Beauty and symmetry to create atmosphere in keeping with traditions of the order has been the aim of the officers who have carried forth the program.

A visit to the cathedral cannot fail to be inspirational to those appreciative of beauty.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

COUNTRY CLUBS

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

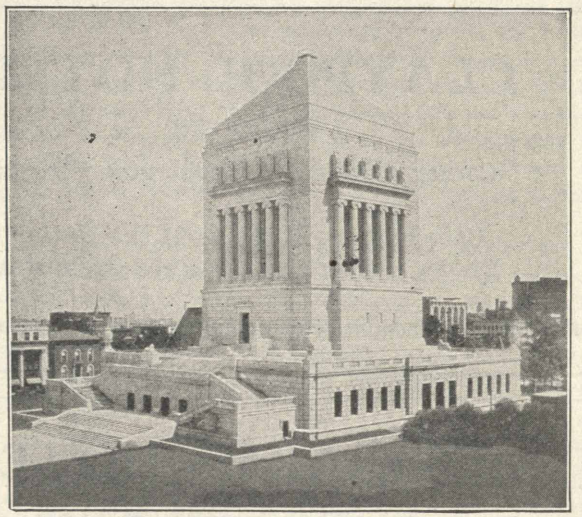
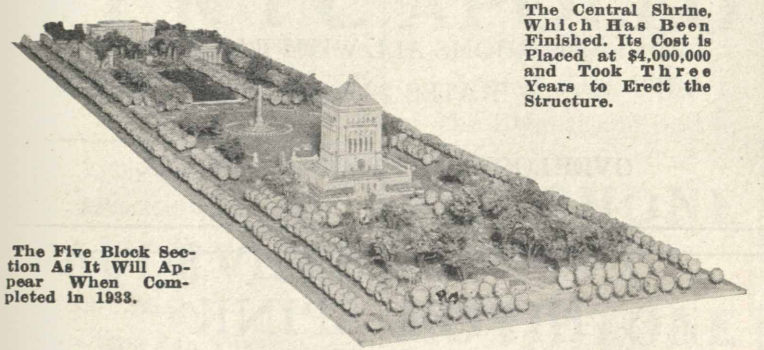
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

Lyric and Apollo

The Lyric Theatre, Indianapolis' popular vaudeville and talking-picture theatre offers a wealth of entertainment at prices within the reach of every purse, not one week but every week in the year. Convention visitors as well as all central Indiana theatre goers make it a point to see these shows each week. The program for the week beginning Saturday, May 3rd, is billed as "A Spring Syncopation Frolic." Jack Kneelaand and his 16 merrymakers, one of vaudeville's finest band acts heads the program. Three other RKO Vaudeville acts and "Crazy That Way," an all talking Movietone picture starring Joan Bennett, is the screen feature.

The Lyric is celebrating their first anniversary during the week beginning Saturday, May 10th. Six big Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville acts have been booked for this gala show. Betty Compson and Lila Lee share starring honors in the all talking Vitaphone picture "Those Who Dance." The Lyric Ballroom is also open and patrons of the theatre may enjoy dancing each evening from eight-thirty to eleven-thirty without extra cost. Free parking space for autos is another service offered to patrons of the Lyric.

During the next few weeks patrons of the Apollo Theatre will have the opportunity of witnessing three of the most stupendous talking and singing productions made this season. Joe E. Brown and Winnie Lightner will appear in "Hold Everything," Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell will be seen in their greatest triumph, "High Society Blues" and Al Jolson returns in his record breaking production, "Mammy." The season of super-attractions is here.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

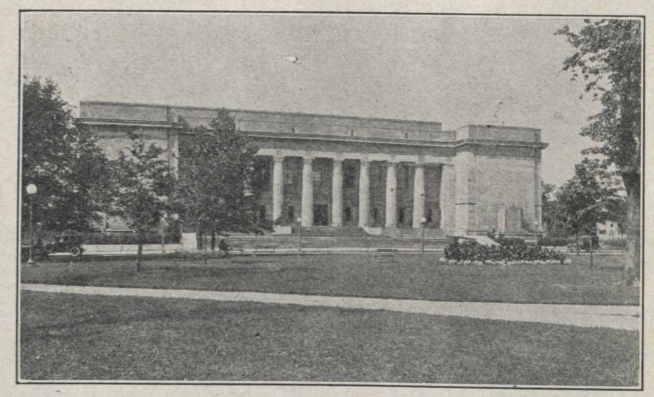
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

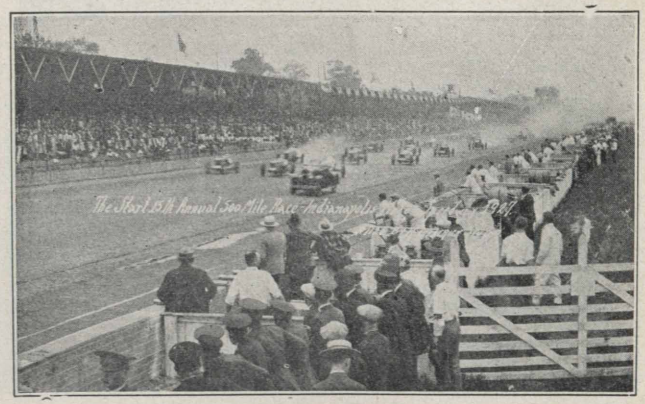
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

Indiana Funeral Directors Ass'n

The Indiana Funeral Directors' Association is making great plans for the observance this year of its fiftieth anniversary. Organized in 1880, it has been in continuous existence ever since that time.

Service to its members, the profession at large, and through them, to the public, has always been the aim of the association. State regulation of the practice of embalming was one of the earliest and important achievements of the organization. The law effecting such regulation was amended from time to time, always with the idea of raising of professional standards in mind, until in 1923, the whole was replaced with a new law, by the legislature of the state.

The most important feature of this enactment was the provision that applicants for license, as embalmers, were required to possess a high school education, or its equivalent. Indiana was the first state of the Union to make this requirement, although, at the present time, almost half of the states have adopted the provision.

The Association itself, as well as its members individually, has always been a leader in the establishment of beneficial reforms in the matter of burial customs of our people. The doing away with of the somber shades, and their replacement with colors, has done much to lighten the tear-producing funeral of past days. Beautiful settings surround the casket, and cemetery arrangements make the open grave a thing of beautiful remembrance, rather than something whose only memory was that of horror.

Scientific knowledge of how properly to prepare the body of one deceased, lightens the cares of the stricken family. No longer is it necessary to close the casket, in so many cases, because no one knew how to take care of the remains of the loved one, in such manner that the body could be viewed.

We mention these things because we firmly believe that through them, we have been of inestimable service to the public at large.

As stated in the opening paragraph, the convention of the Association this year is in the nature of a celebration of its fiftieth or golden anniversary.

The convention and display of funeral merchandise will be held under the same roof in the Manufacturers' Building, State Fair Grounds, Indianapolis. The dates are May 20-21-22. The program will be of great interest to every funeral director, and a large attendance is expected.

On Tuesday evening, May 20, after 8 P. M., the general public is especially and cordially invited to visit the displays.

Present President, J. A. Coffing, Attica, Ind.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

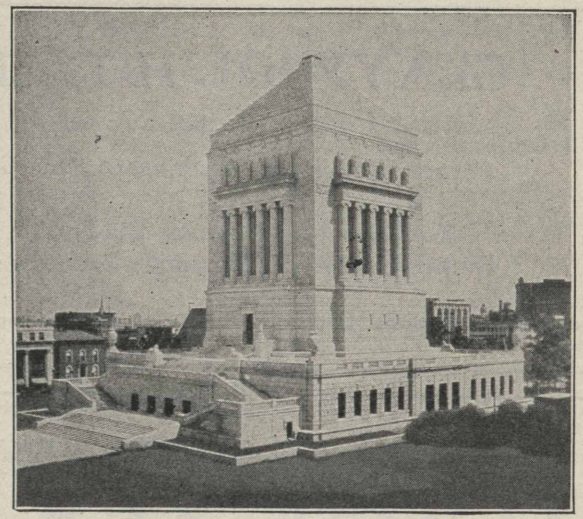
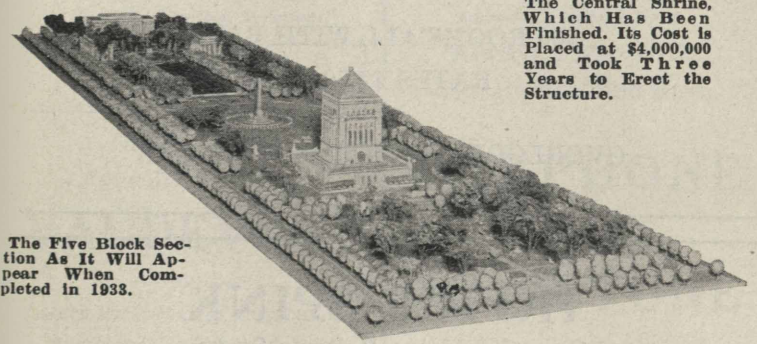
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

Lyric and Apollo

Summer time at the Lyric gives promise of many great stage and screen shows. The pick of RKO stage attractions will be seen on each bill together with the latest Vitaphone and Movietone feature picture releases. The New Carrier System of Refrigeration just installed will insure every patron against the heat. No matter what the temperature outside may be, the temperature inside the Lyric theatre will always be set at sixty-eight degrees.

Week of May 17th brings Warner Baxter in his latest outdoor talking romance "The Arizona Kid," a sequel to his masterpiece "In Old Arizona." Mona Maris and Carol Lombard are his two leading ladies. A four act bill of RKO vaudeville headliners will be featured on the stage show.

Week of May 24th "The Isle of Escape" is to be the feature picture. Myrna Loy, Betty Compson and Monte Blue are featured in this tropical love drama. A stage show of RKO vaudeville attractions also augment this program.

Free parking space is another inducement for patrons of the Lyric Theatre. Dancing is a nightly feature in the new ballroom which is offered patrons of the theatre without extra cost.

During the last two weeks of May, the Apollo has arranged for the appearance of Al Jolson in "Mammy," a Warner Brothers and Vitaphone singing, dancing and laughing production in technicolor. In this great song-fest Jolson has a decidedly different role than those of his previous pictures, as in this new film his aim is to make the audience laugh instead of cry. He also returns to black-face, the happy medium in which he became famous. The story was written by Irving Berlin as was the many song hits that Jolson sings throughout the picture. Short subjects are always included on the Apollo program.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

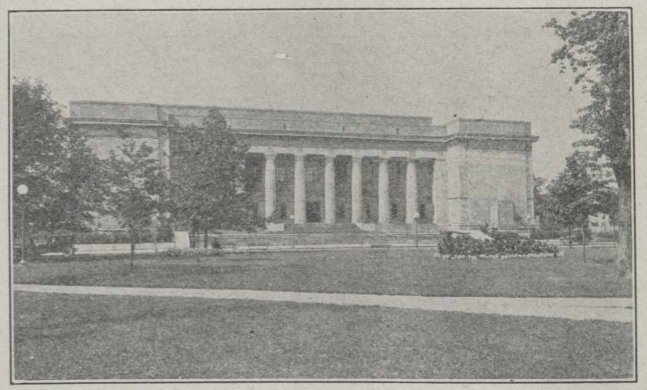
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

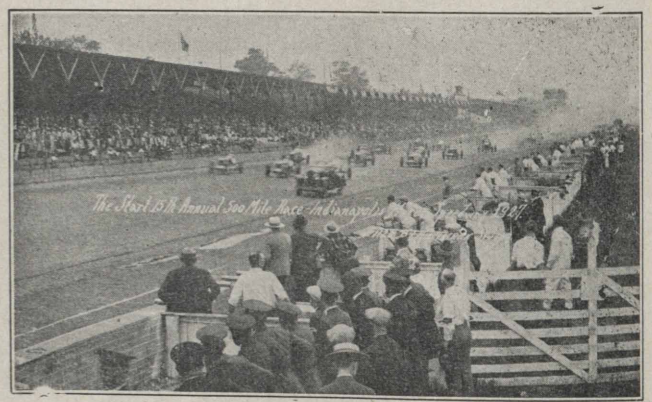
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

FIRST JUNE ISSUE, 1930

County Superintendents

Educational problems, both of the school room and of the administrative counting room, will be up for thorough discussion when the Indiana State County Superintendents' Association comes to Indianapolis for its annual meeting June 6.

Sessions this year will be held at the Lincoln, as has been the custom for the last several years. Lee O. Baird, of Muncie, is president of the association.

The county superintendents gathered in meeting have each year been the focal point for analization of problems which are of paramount importance to the state in an educational way. Not only do they touch upon the instructional questions that must be answered for and by the teacher, but the problems of school financing, physical equipment, and handling of pupils are at their finger tips.

Leaders in the educational field who are thoroughly versed in the problems that interest the superintendents will be on the speakers' program. Round table discussions will prove of further value to the members of the association.

Indianapolis takes pride in entertaining the county superintendents, for it recognizes that their positions in the educational activities of the state are of great value and that their sessions here may produce ideas which will benefit every citizen of the state.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

COUNTRY CLUBS

Avalon Country Club—Millersville Road, nine and one-half miles northeast of city.

Broadmoor Country Club—West Fifty-fourth Street.

Meridian Hills Country Club—Spring Mill Road.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

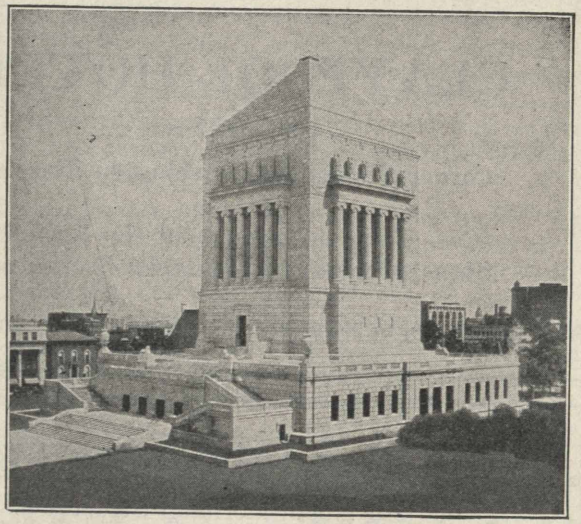
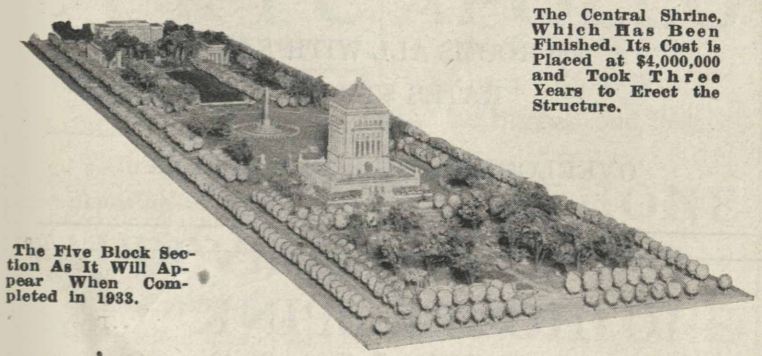
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.





The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.

The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

Lyric and Apollo

The month of June sees many super-talking pictures listed for the Lyric Theatre, in addition to RKO vaudeville attractions of the highest calibre. Starting May 31st for one week "Men Without Women" the great Fox Movietone special which has been classed among the outstanding features of 1930 will be shown. This is a powerful and gripping drama of the submarine service and boasts of an all star masculine cast. Kenneth MacKenna and Frank Albertson have the leading roles. The stage show will be headed by Primrose Semon, vaudeville's famous red-headed comedienne. The week of June 7th will bring Grant Withers and Loretta Young, Hollywood's most romantic young couple in their first co-starring production called "The Second Floor Mystery." This picture is heralded as one of the really worth-while mystery dramas of the current season. The usual excellent vaudeville show will accompany this feature picture. Edmund Lowe comes in "Born Reckless" his latest starring picture starting June 15th. Free parking space for its patrons is an added service which the Lyric offers to its patrons.

The Apollo Theatre is presenting "High Society Blues" for their current attraction. Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, two of the screen's most popular sweethearts, who made motion picture history with their performances in "Sunny Side Up," have the leading role in this latest Fox Musical Romance, and they are just as sweet as ever in this film. Many new and novel song hits are interspersed throughout the picture, and a very beautiful love story is unfolded during the progress of the film. The usual high class short subjects are also on the programme.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

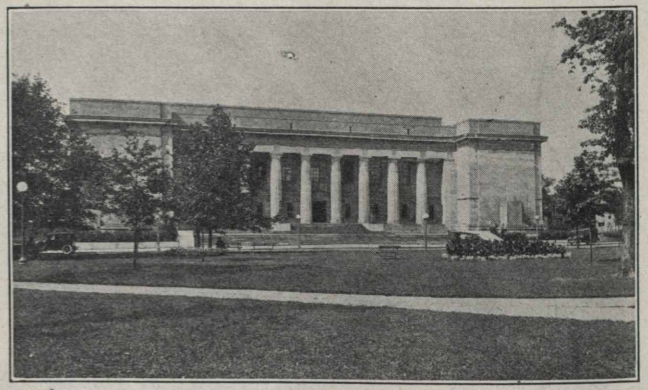
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

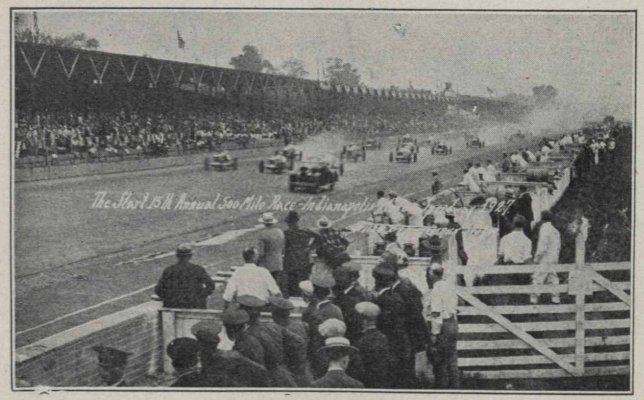
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

FIRST JULY ISSUE, 1930

Indiana Fire Chiefs Welcome to Indianapolis

Indianapolis takes great pleasure in extending a welcome to the Indiana Fire Chiefs' Association.

Preparations already made indicate that the convention starting July 9 will be one of the outstanding in the city during 1930. A meeting drawing an attendance of three or four hundred people is one which any city is glad to entertain, and Indianapolis feels duly honored in being selected for this session.

The Indianapolis Convention Bureau, the city government, and all of departments of the community, both official and unofficial, are at all times prepared and eager to make convention visitors feel that while they are in the city they are not merely a composite part of the population, but individuals who have accepted our invitation.

There are many things to see and do in Indianapolis for the people who live here. There are a great many more things for those who are visiting. The Indiana World War Memorial Plaza, the Soldiers and Sailors Monument, Fort Benjamin Harrison, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, 3,000 acres of beautiful public parks, scores of tennis courts, five municipal golf courses, four of which are eighteen holes, two amusement parks, canoeing, swimming, and motoring along boulevards lined by magnificent residents—these are some of the diversions to which we may refer offhand.

Indianapolis is an industrial city which does not depend on any one industry for its prosperity. Its list of manufactured products is highly diversified and go all over the world. It is a rapidly developing aviation center and has been a railroad and interurban line center for more than a quarter of a century.

The stay of the Indiana Fire Chiefs' Association is certain to be worthwhile for those who attend the meeting and will be a source of satisfaction to the city of Indianapolis.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

Greens fee, for all courses, 50 cents, except Sarah Shank, which is 25 cents.

COUNTRY CLUBS

Avalon Country Club—Millersville Road, nine and one-half miles northeast of city.

Broadmoor Country Club—West Fifty-fourth Street.

Highland Golf and Country Club—Fifty-fourth and Whitehead Streets.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

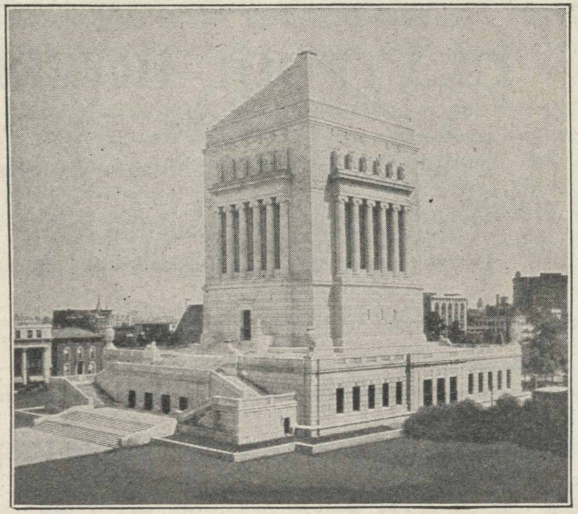
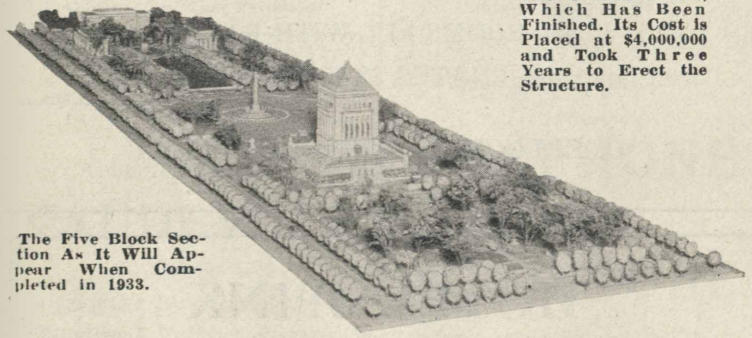
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

Lyric and Apollo

Summer time in the Lyric Theatre offers ideal comfort to its patrons. The refrigeration system of cooling in this theatre guarantees patrons clean cool and healthful washed and chilled air at all times. The Lyric is never cold, but instead is kept an even and comfortable temperature at every hour during the day or night. A complete list of the stage and screen bookings will be found in the amusement guide elsewhere in this book. The Lyric offers one of Indianapolis' greatest amusement values. Here is presented the pick of first run talking pictures in conjunction with Radio-Keith-Orpheum Vaudeville acts on the stage. All this is offered at a reasonable admission price.

Apollo Theatre programs seem to be getting bigger and better as the summer months creep on, and the forth coming attractions for the next two weeks seem to speak for themselves. The new edition of "Movietone Follies" is sure to please the most skptical of theatre patron, as the cast includes El Brendel, famous Swede comic and Marjorie White, petite Broadway songstress. "Golden Dawn," too, a light operetta of the African jungles is pleasant entertainment. The cast includes Vivienne Segal and Walter Woolf.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

AN AMERICAN CITY

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

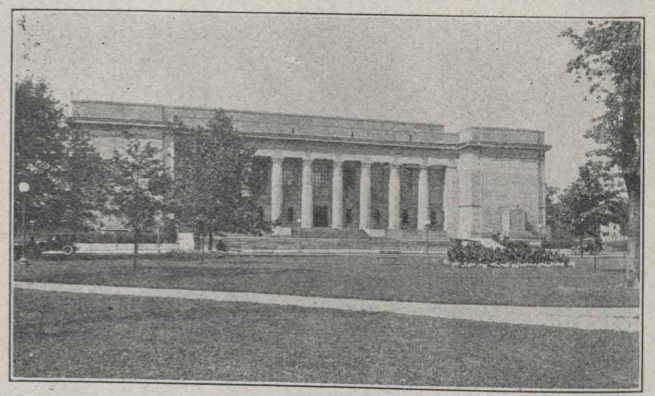
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is;

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

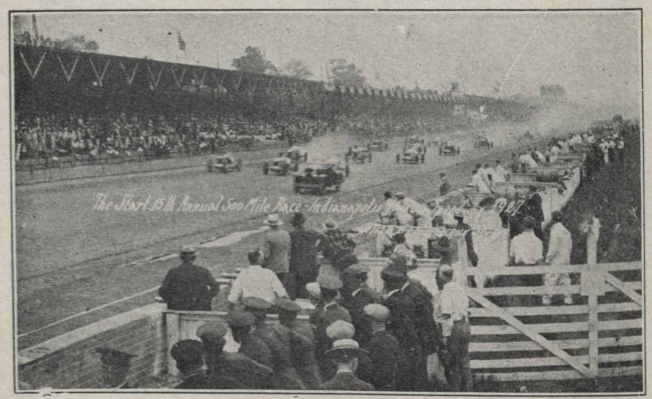
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

SECOND JULY ISSUE, 1930

PHI DELTA KAPPA

The Indianapolis Convention Bureau hereby wishes to confirm an editorial statement in the Phi Delta Kappa Magazine that "Indianapolis is all agog over the prospect of our meeting there."

With a convention "log" showing a meeting of some sort almost every day in the year, one might wonder how a city of 400,000 could become "all agog" over any kind of an assembly.

The explanation of that goes back a hundred years or so. There is a legend, you may know, that the term "Hoosier" originated in the days when a stranger in our midst created a sensation. The story goes that, as the visitor lumbered by in his wagon, a native would shout "Who's'yer?" Or, in modern Indianaese, "Who are you?" The records show that, the visitor having revealed his identity, he was greeted cordially and invited to break bread.

Phi Delta Kappa revealed its identity to Indiana many years ago. The presence of its local chapters in various Indiana cities makes unnecessary an introduction to the general populace of who and what the fraternity is and stands for. Having been thoroughly apprised of that, the city of Indianapolis has left its doors standing wide, and all the visitors from all parts of the country need do is enter. There will be plenty to do. If any one doubts this, let him ask one of the delegates who attended the convention here several years ago.

Entertainment of visitors is a tradition, you see. It is an accomplishment and a privilege that has been handed down through generations. Indianapolis awaits the opportunity to prove to Phi Delts the tradition has been well preserved.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

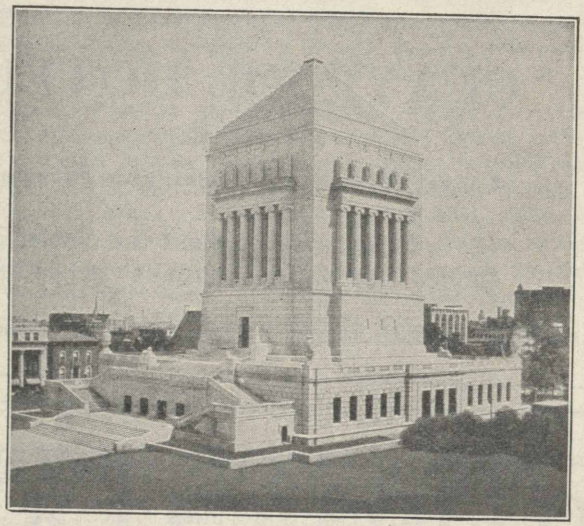
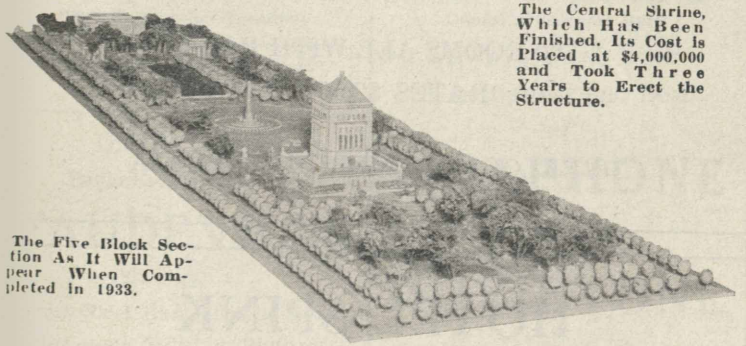
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.



The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

Lyric and Apollo

Summer time is turned into winter time in the Lyric Theatre. Here theatregoers are assured of the greatest amount of cool comfort while enjoying one of the best shows in Indianapolis. The Lyric offers a complete change of program every Saturday. Each program includes a new all talking picture feature in addition to four headline acts of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Vaudeville. The Lyric also features talking comedies and other screen novelties. A snappy orchestra is also one of the Lyric features. A refrigeration plant guarantees patrons of the theatre a temperature of 68 degrees at all times. This system does not throw off iced air, nor does it create draughts, but instead the air is healthfully cooled by purified water that is kept at an even temperature always. Popular prices prevail for all performances which begin at 11 A. M. and run until 11 P. M.

The Apollo has arranged for especially selected summer fare to make up their programmes, and during the next two weeks will be presented productions of a comedy nature. "Cheer Up and Smile," a radio comedy romance features "Whispering" Jack Smith, Arthur Lake and Dixie Lee. "Women Everywhere," brings to the screen Harold Murray, noted singer in numerous musical comedy productions and Fifi Dorsay, vivacious French actress who has won many admirers since entering the audible picture field. "Women Everywhere" deals with the various episodes of a French rum-runner and is highly entertaining with both comedy and romance.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

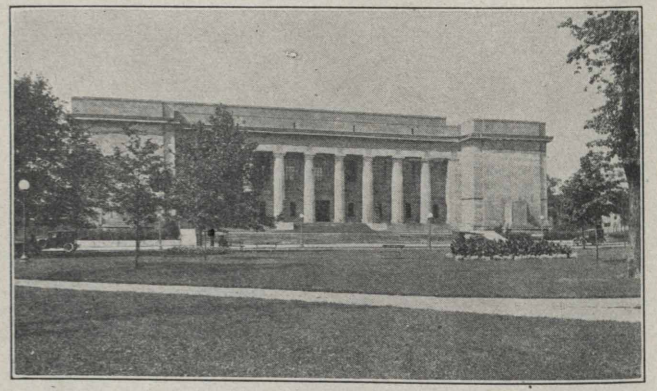
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

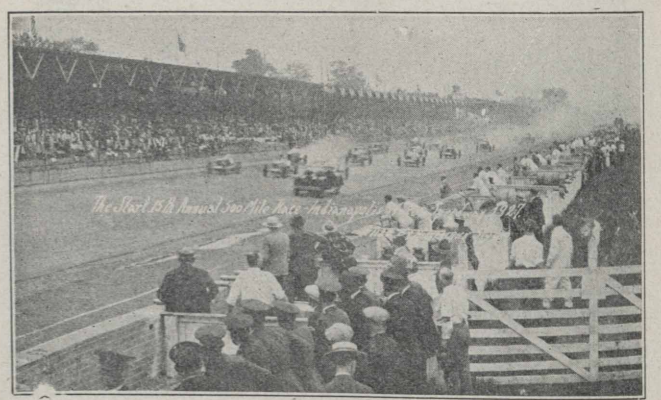
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

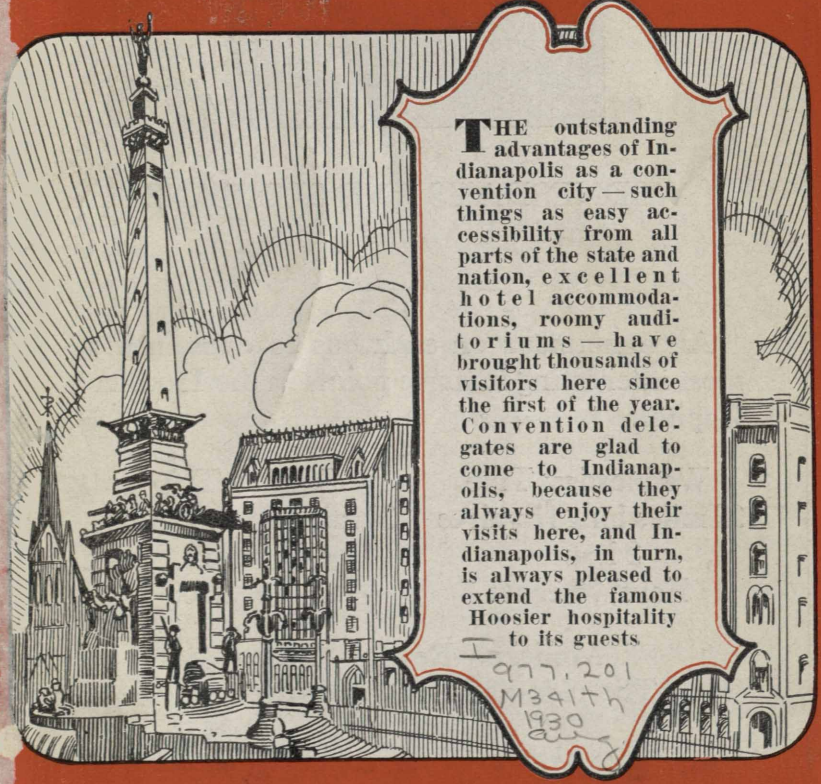
INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

THIS WEEK in INDIANAPOLIS



THE outstanding advantages of Indianapolis as a convention city — such things as easy accessibility from all parts of the state and nation, excellent hotel accommodations, roomy auditoriums — have brought thousands of visitors here since the first of the year. Convention delegates are glad to come to Indianapolis, because they always enjoy their visits here, and Indianapolis, in turn, is always pleased to extend the famous Hoosier hospitality to its guests.

FIRST AUGUST ISSUE, 1930

Our Third Milestone

With this issue, "This Week in Indianapolis" celebrates its entry into our fourth year of publication. During the past three years we have tried to faithfully serve the enormous transient population of Indianapolis by issuing twenty-four issues a year, semi-monthly, giving these visitors the wide range of information about our community that is contained between our covers.

In seventy-two issues just passed, over 200,000 of our "book-family" have gone from the presses into the hands of the city's visitors, serving to acquaint them with Indianapolis, assist them in getting about the city, and performing our bit of "Hoosier Welcome." We believe we have done a good job.

Any congratulations due on our third birthday go directly and wholeheartedly to our advertisers, both present and past. They, through their financial co-operation, have made our "life" possible. We feel we have rendered them a service in return, by giving them this medium of effective contact with the visitor, that he may know of their business. But our sincere thanks and appreciation of the advertiser's support is extended by us over and above any service we may have performed them.

We are no longer a "child." We have passed our "experimentation" or "infant" stage with the end of one year's publication. The second and third year, or "solidification" stage has also been passed. We are now entering our "expansion" stage and hope to grow even better and even more effective now that we are fully "grown up."

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

Greens fee, for all courses, 50 cents, except Sarah Shank, which is 25 cents.

COUNTRY CLUBS

Avalon Country Club—Millersville Road, nine and one-half miles northeast of city.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

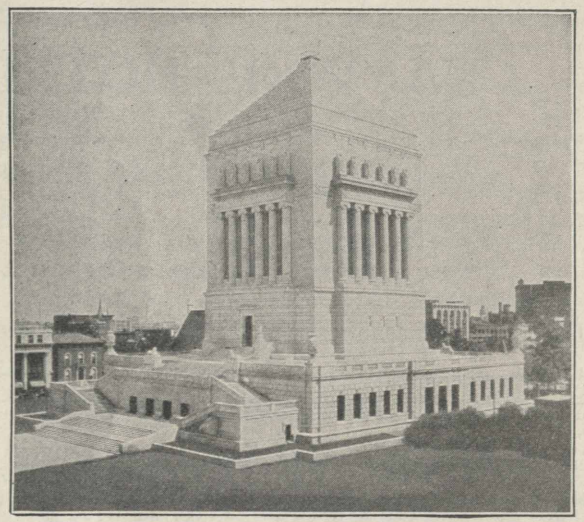
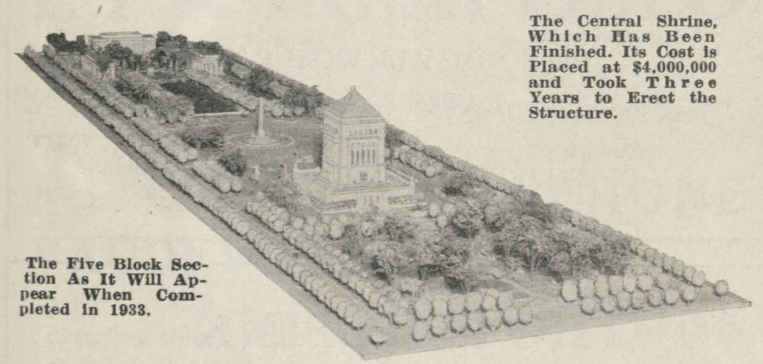
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.





The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.

The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

Lyric and Apollo

August shows give promise of being outstanding entertainment events at the Lyric Theatre. With the cooling system going full blast the Lyric is a haven of comfort and rest for its patrons while they enjoy the pick of RKO Varieties on the stage and first run all-talking feature pictures on the screen. There is a complete change of both stage and screen attractions every Saturday. Shows are continuous from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M. Popular prices prevail at all times. Shows are especially booked to appeal to the entire family and on each program will be found something special for the kiddies. The Lyric management solicits children patronage and have the lowest children admission price of any large downtown theatre.

The Apollo Theatre management gives the information that two of the new season's product will be offered during the next few weeks. The first, "Dancing Sweeties" co-starring Sue Carol and Grant Withers is a story of modern youth having it's fling at life. The second, "Good Intentions," featuring Edmund Lowe, is the story of a man who rose by sheer strength from the slums and moulded for himself a career of wealth and power. Especially selected short subjects including Vitaphone acts, Fox Movietone News and Screen Oddities are included on all Apollo programs. You will always be sure of a splendid evening's entertainment at the home of the Vitaphone.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

AN AMERICAN CITY

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

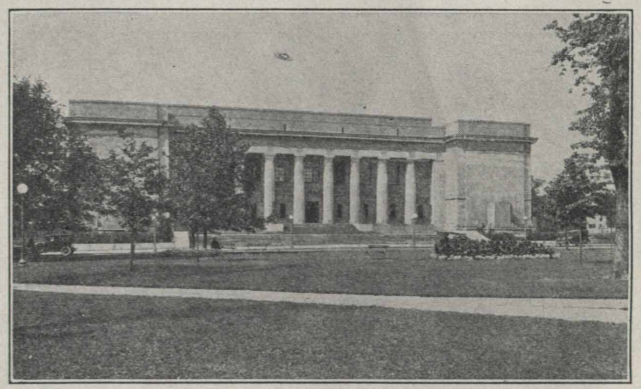
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

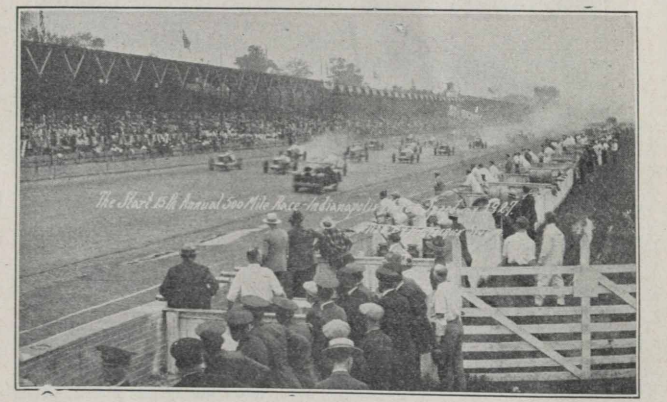
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

SECOND AUGUST ISSUE, 1930

Indiana State Fair

(August 30th—September 6th)

According to present indications everything points to the fact that the 1930 Edition of The Indiana State Fair will no doubt be the greatest Fair which the Hoosier State has had the honor of staging. The Indiana State Board of Agriculture has announced that more than $173,000 will be spent in premiums and purses this year, which is around $2,000 more than was spent last year. During the past year, the Fair Board has made every conceivable effort to give the people of Indiana the very best from the standpoint of exhibits, and entertainment. It was after many months of hard work that the State Board of Agriculture was again able to announce that The National Swine Show would be held for the second consecutive year in connection with this years' State Fair. In addition practically all departments are making plans for caring for more extensive exhibits than ever before. In the field of entertainment Fair Visitors will be provided with every possible line of amusement including races, shows and special attractions of every kind. Furthermore an Agricultural Fair is the only event where such educational and profitable advantages can suitably be combined with such pleasures and amusements. There will be unlimited things to see that will be of major interest to everyone attending. So make your plans right now to attend the 78th Anniversary of The Indiana State Fair—August 30 to September 6 at The State Fair Grounds in Indianapolis.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

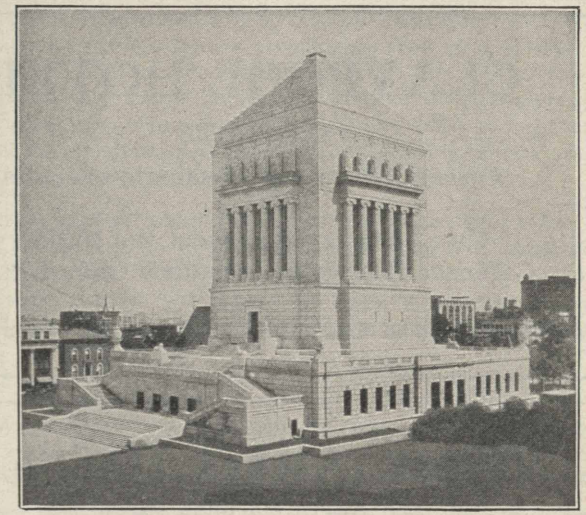
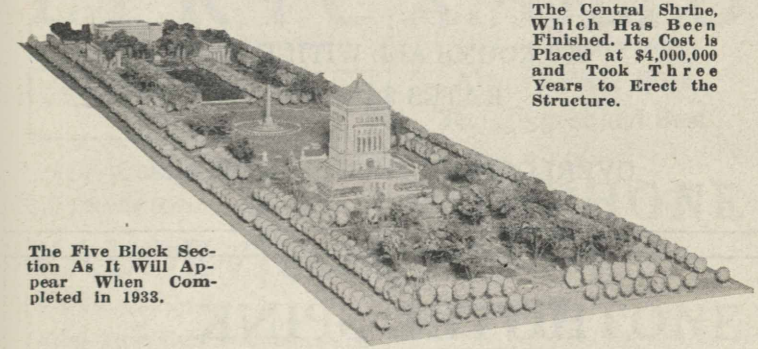
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.





The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.

The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

Lyric and Apollo

The Lyric Theatre is truly one of Indianapolis' most popular entertainment centers. It affords theatre-goers, convention visitors and tourists, genuine high-class stage and screen entertainment every week in the year. The stage show is composed of RKO Vaudeville acts, each selected because of its merits. A clean, wholesome and entertaining stage show is the guarantee of the theatre management. In addition to this vaudeville program the Lyric also presents first run Fox Movietone and Warner Brothers' Vitaphone feature picture productions. The pick of short subjects are also shown and include a talking comedy, Movietone News Reel and other novelties. The Lyric Orchestra is another added feature of the show. Special rates are given to convention visitors while in Indianapolis. There is a complete change of program every Saturday. Shows are continuous from 11 to 11 daily. Popular prices prevail at all times.

An unmarried mother fighting to regain a place among the "best people"; this is the keynote of "Common Clay" the Fox movietone of Cleve Kinkead's famous Harvard prize play which opens at the Apollo Theatre Thursday, August 14th. Constance Bennett and Lew Ayres are co-featured. The usual spicy short subjects are included on the programme.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

To Cincinnati by Parlor Car and Motor Coach

Passengers traveling to Cincinnati have the added advantage of riding in both parlor cars and deluxe motor coaches, under an arrangement recently inaugurated by the Indianapolis and Southeastern Lines, at a very nominal fare.

The company's parlor cars leave the local Traction Terminal Station, located at Illinois and Market streets, at 7:00 A. M., 12:00 Noon, and 3:00 P. M. Direct connections is made at Greensburg with the company's large motor coaches, which leave immediately for the Queen City.

Towns served along this route include Shelbyville, Greensburg, Batesville, Sunman, Manchester, Aurora and Lawrenceburg. The Cincinnati depot is located in the heart of the downtown district at Eighth and Walnut streets. The leaving time from Cincinnati is 7:00 and 10:00 A. M., 2:00 and 5:25 P. M. (Eastern Standard Time).

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

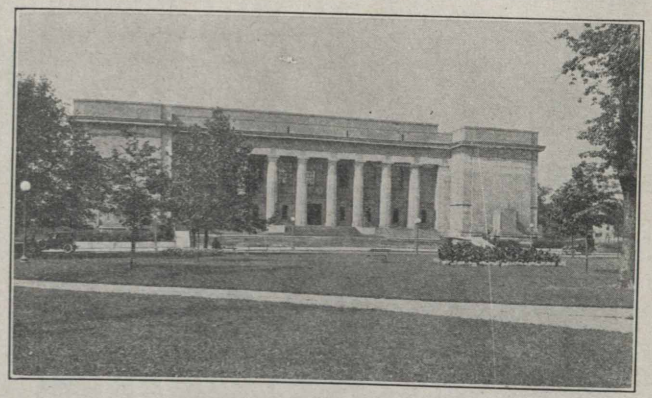
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

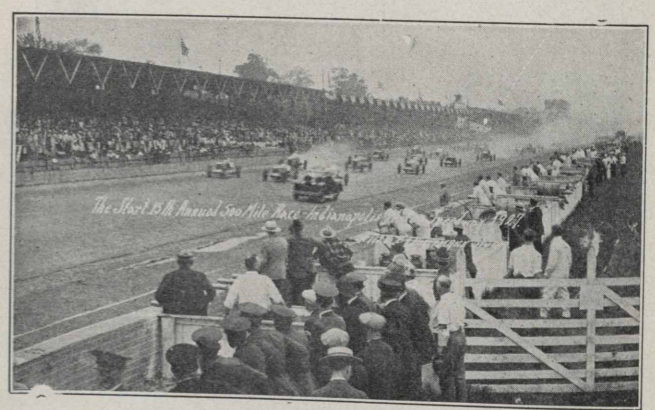
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

FIRST SEPTEMBER ISSUE, 1930

Organized Labor Holds Spotlight

Organized labor will sit squarely in the center of the Hoosier stage during the week of September 6 to 12, inclusive.

Four important organizations will hold meetings here during that week and advance reports indicate full attendance and programs which will attract much interest.

The Indiana division of the United Brotherhood of Painters will be the first of the four meetings to convene. They will be in session at the Claypool Hotel September 6 and 7 and will have at least 100 delegates.

The Indiana division of the United Association of Plumbers and steam fitters will be in session at the Claypool September 7. The State Building Trade Association will convene September 8 and 9 at the hotel and activity will reach a peak September 10, 11 and 12 with the annual meeting of the Indiana State Federation of Labor.

Adolph J. Fritz, 605 People's Bank Building, is secretary of all four organizations.

The rapidly growing importance of Indianapolis as a center of labor union activity will be further enhanced by these four sessions. The entire city welcomes the visitors and will be prepared to display its usual welcome and hospitality.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

Greens fee, for all courses, 50 cents, except Sarah Shank, which is 25 cents.

COUNTRY CLUBS

Avalon Country Club—Millersville Road, nine and one-half miles northeast of city.

Broadmoor Country Club—West Fifty-fourth Street.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

PUBLIC PARKS

Brookside—Beautiful scenic park along Pogue's Run, from North Rural Street to Sherman Drive. Take Brookside car.

Spades—Adjoining Brookside Park and extending from Newman Street to Tacoma Avenue along Pogue's Run. Take Brookside car.

Ellenberger (also known as Jameson Park)—East from Emerson Avenue to Arlington Avenue, south of St. Clair Street. Take East Washington car and get off at Emerson Avenue—5100 block. Tennis courts, picnic grounds, children's playground.

Riverside (now also called Taggart Park)—A park of 950 acres, with two golf courses, bridle paths, picnic grounds, facilities for canoeing and a tourists' camp. Reached by Riverside car. Get off at end of line.

St. Clair Park—A public square opposite Riley Library and within walking distance of town, at St. Clair and Pennsylvania Streets. Also reached by Pennsylvania Street car.

University Park—Two blocks north of the Monument, between Meridian, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New York Streets. A restful and beautiful little park in the heart of the city.

Willard Park—East Washington Street at State Street. A public park near the Pennsylvania Shops. Swimming pool, children's playground and some picnic space. Take East Washington Street car to State Street.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

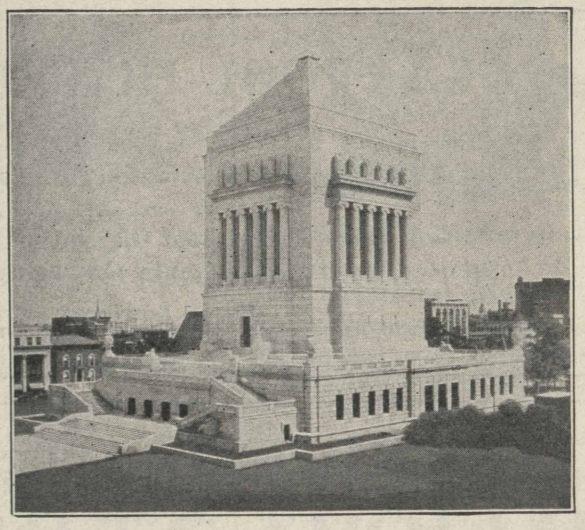
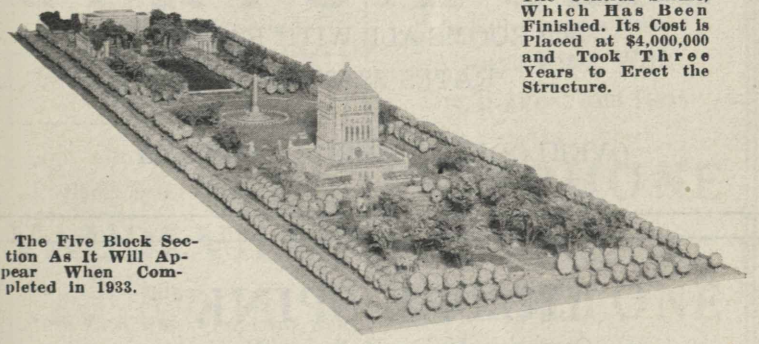
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.





The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.

The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

HOW TO GET ABOUT THE CITY

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

AN AMERICAN CITY

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

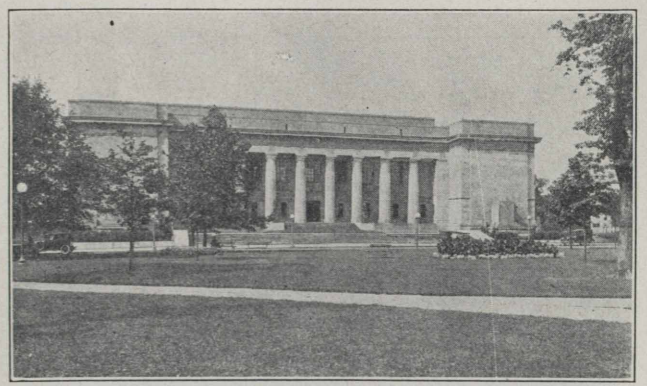
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

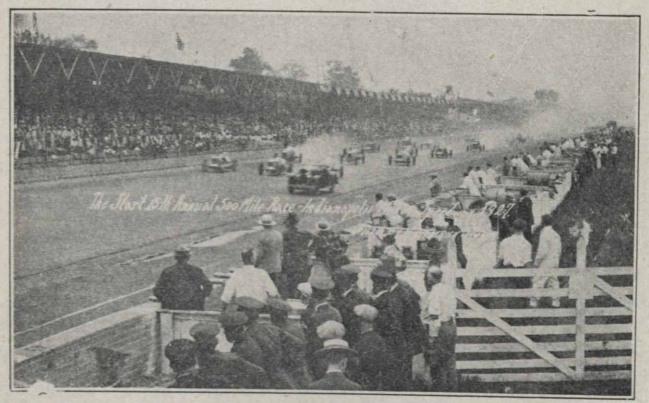
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67

SECOND SEPTEMBER ISSUE, 1930

Girl Scouts Convene

Indianapolis will have an enviable opportunity to view an impressive panorama of Girl Scout work during the last two weeks of September when the National Girl Scout Training School will be in session.

The school opens September 15 and continues until September 29. Part of the sessions will be held at Camp Dellwood north of the city and part at the Hotel Lincoln downtown. It is estimated that approximately 1,000 girls from all parts of the nation will be in attendance.

The training school is an important adjunct of Girl Scout activities. It is from this school that a great many of the leaders in the movement emerge. They will return to their home environments with a keener perspective and a more thorough knowledge of Scout work and their sojourn in Indianapolis will at the same time reveal to the city just how inclusive the activities of the organization have become. Indianapolis is proud to have been selected for the meeting, as the delegates will discover upon their arrival here and during their stay.

The last half of September will bring five other meetings to the city which may be expected to contribute materially to the Hoosier Capitol's prestige for attracting important organizations. These are the world convention of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, with an attendance of 5,000, the national assembly of the Order of Rebekah with an attendance of five hundred, the Patriarchs Militant Independent Order of Odd Fellows which will be attended by five hundred, the Indiana Association of Park Departments and its 200 delegates, and the Indiana Association of Inspectors of Weights and Measures which will attract between fifty and one hundred members.

The Indianapolis Convention Bureau and the City as a whole extends a cordial welcome to all of these visitors.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES

The city of Indianapolis maintains six municipal golf courses where the public may enjoy the ancient Scottish pastime at small cost. The courses are:

South Grove—Parkway Boulevard and Eighteenth Street. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 4900.

Pleasant Run—North Arlington Avenue and E. 10th Street, in Irvington. East Washington Street car. Telephone, Irvington 2837.

Sarah Shank—Troy and Keystone Avenues. Beech Grove street car or bus. Nine holes.

Riverside—Thirtieth Street and west bank of White River. Riverside street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3286.

Speedway—Sixteenth Street at Speedway. Speedway bus.

Charles E. Coffin—Thirtieth Street and Cold Spring Road. Riverside Street car or Riverside bus. Telephone, Talbot 3200.

The Riverside and Coffin Courses are situated so that they can be used together for tournament play, forming the only thirty-six hole municipal golf course in the world.

Douglass Park—(Colored) Columbia Avenue street car. Telephone Hemlock 5146.

Why Indianapolis Is Hospitable

To be truly appreciative of organizations and the conventions they stage, a city's populace must be the type which is given to organizing. Indianapolis is the home of hundreds of clubs, civic organizations, fraternities, lodges and similar groups. These are the people who have made the city famous as a gracious host for convention visitors. They attend conventions in strange cities themselves and the ideas they have accumulated for entertainment are poured into a centralized program to make visitors welcome.

Thousands of Indianapolis wrestling fans are grateful to Jimmy McLemore for the enterprise he displays in the weekly wrestling shows at Tomlinson hall. The contests have become an institution with a wide following. Jimmy's cards are packed with excitement.—Every Monday night.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institutions, synonmous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

THE HOME OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

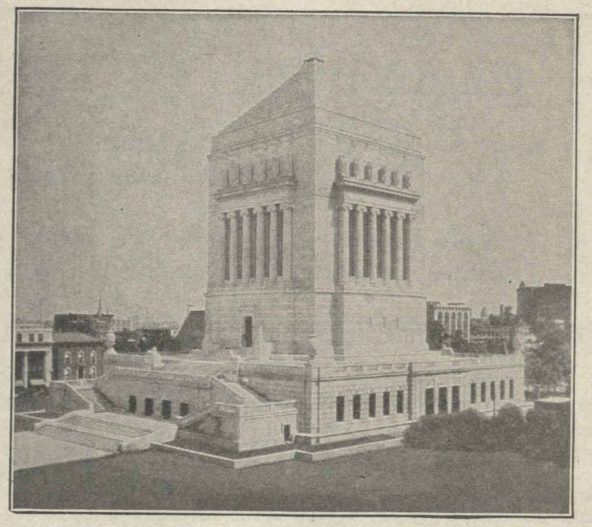
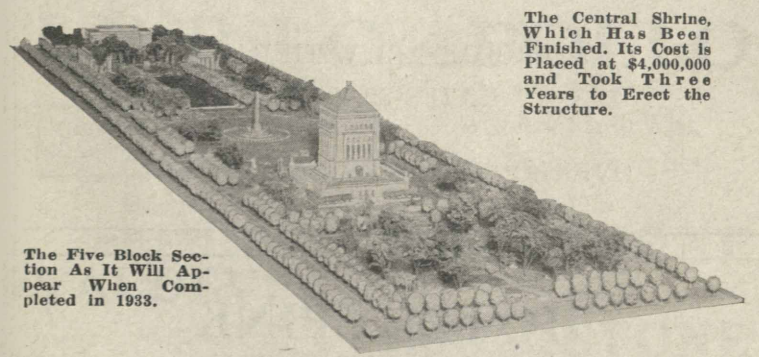
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.





The Central Shrine, Which Has Been Finished. Its Cost is Placed at $4,000,000 and Took Three Years to Erect the Structure.

The Five Block Section As It Will Appear When Completed in 1933.

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $10,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

INDIANAPOLIS possesses the very best of hotel facilities. All of the principal hotels are situated in the center of the business and shopping district and each is provided with a fine auditorium suitable for large conventions and smaller halls for meetings of less magnitude. One difference between Indianapolis' hotels and those of many other large cities is that the management of each is thoroughly imbued with the friendly spirit of this city and uncommon pains are taken to insure the happiness and comfort of each individual guest. It is just a part of Indianapolis' program to sustain the city's reputation for hospitality and it has paid big dividends in a country-wide feeling of friendliness for our city.

LYRIC

On September 20th the Lyric Theatre announces that "Oh Sailor Behave!" Warner Bros. special Vitaphone production featuring Olsen and Johnson, will be the feature attraction.

"Oh Sailor Behave!" which is taken from the play, "See Naples and Die," by Elmer Rice, and adapted to the screen by Joseph Jackson, brings to talking picture audiences one of the greatest casts ever assembled in one picture.

Besides Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson, America's funniest clowns, such outstanding artists as Irene Delroy, Charles King, Lotti Loder, Noah Berry, Lowell Sherman, Vivien Oakland, Charles Judels and Lawrence Grant are included in the cast.

The story, which abounds with action and side-splitting comedy, is laid in the beautiful city of Naples.

Archie Mayo, who was responsible for two of this year's most hilarious comedies, "The Sap," and "Wide Open" with Edward Everett Horton, directed "Oh Sailor Behave!"

Here is presented the pick of first run talking pictures, also six acts of Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville on the stage. News reels and short subjects complete the bill. All this is offered at a reasonable admission price. The management also announces the opening of the Lyric ballroom a part of the grand fall opening program on the 20th.

APOLLO

Smacking of salty spray and the hot breath of adventure, "The Sea Wolf," Fox Movietone talkie of the famous Jack London novel, comes to the Apollo Theatre on September 20th with Milton Sills, Jane Keith and Raymond Hackett in the featured roles.

The picture is a thrilling tale of a strange romance aboard a sealing vessel in the North Pacific, with the menacing figure of the "Wolf," the master of the schooner, furnishing the powerful drama and gripping situations of the story. With its nautical sequences filmed entirely at sea, even to the precedent of making the cabin interiors right aboard the specially fitted schooner, Director Alfred Santell is said to have achieved unusual realism in his handling of the story. In addition the Apollo offers its usual variety of comedies, news reels and short subjects.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

A Condensed Tour of Thirty-five Points of Interest in Indianapolis

NOTE: Points numbered from 1 to 19 are within walking distance of the Monument Circle. Points from 1 to 24 may be reached by taking a Pennsylvania Street car and walking one block west to Meridian or one block east to Delaware Street. Points from 23 to 31 may be reached by Illinois car marked Fairgrounds.

THE INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

2. THE INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT—The first monument erected primarily to honor the private soldier. Its construction was authorized by an act of the General Assembly in 1887, and the commission for its design was awarded Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. It was completed in 1902 at a cost of over $500,000. This memorial, built for the ages, of Indiana oolitic limestone embellished with bronze is considered by art critics to be the most outstanding work of its kind in America. At the base of the monument, statues of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton commemorate four epochs in the history of Indiana. Terraced fountains that gush from two sides of the rugged base are crowned by heroic sculptural groups; one of them depicting War, the other Peace. Tablets of carved stone above the portal on the south side of the monument and in the same relative position on the north apprise in detail Indiana's record in all wars our country has participated in including the Spanish-American war. A museum of interesting mementos of these struggles is housed within the base. The monument, including the crowning figure popularly known as Miss Indiana, is 284½ feet high. An observation platform, from which a superb view of the city may be had, is reached by elevator or stairs within the shaft.

Other worthwhile sights within a few feet of the Monument are:

3. THE COLUMBIA CLUB—An organization originally formed to foster the ideals of Republicanism. The present building supersedes the original club house built in 1900, and is one of the finest in the state.

4. CHRIST CHURCH—Architecturally reminiscent of the Old World, "The Little Church on the Corner" at the northeast corner of the Circle and Meridian Street.

5. THE ENGLISH HOTEL—One of the earliest landmarks of the "Big City" era in Indianapolis. Now a modern hotel. The English Theatre is in the same building.

7. THE U. S. COURT HOUSE AND POSTOFFICE—The building was completed in 1904. It houses all the local offices except those of the weather bureau, the U. S. Army recruiting service and the bureau of animal industries. Next in interest to the postoffice within the building is the Federal court room where many trials of national importance have been held within the past decade.

8. WORLD WAR MEMORIAL—All of the land between Meridian Street and Pennsylvania Street from the Postoffice north to the Public Library is included in that vast project conceived in honor of the memory of Indiana's participation in the World War. This Memorial Plaza, the construction of which is now well under way, will be one of the most impressive of its kind in the world.

10. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING—A Gothic structure across Meridian Street from University Park.

11. THE INDIANAPOLIS ATHLETIC CLUB—The imposing building at the corner of Vermont and Meridian Streets is replete with gymnasiums, baths, dining and ball rooms, recreation rooms.

12. THE ELKS CLUB—One of the newest and finest club buildings in the city is owned and occupied by the local membership of the Elks, at 750 North Meridian Street.

13. THE SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL—Planned on a scale of almost startling magnificence, this edifice, now building, will be one of the most imposing in the array of architectural splendor facing the Memorial Plaza.

14. THE HOOSIER ATHLETIC CLUB—Members of its athletic teams hold many high honors in the athletic annals of the country. The early date of its founding, 1879, makes it one of the pioneer clubs of the city. It is located at Pratt and Meridian Streets.

15. THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—A friendly welcome awaits the visitor to the Indianapolis Library. There are many convenient neighborhood branches. The main building is on St. Clair Street between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

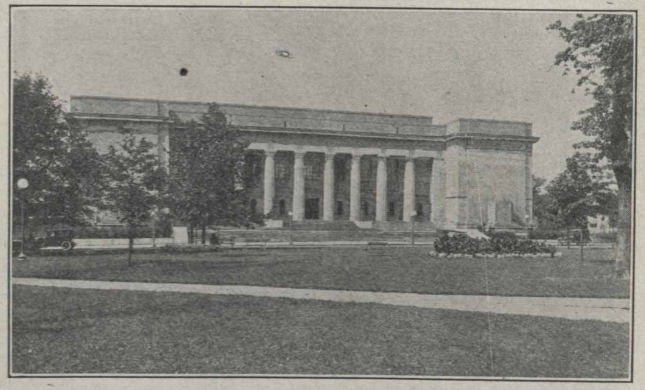
17. INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY—On Pennsylvania Street, one block east of Meridian Street. A massive building of stone which has been equipped with every facility to further the efficiency of the guardsmen.

One block west of Meridian Street on Illinois Street at the corner of North Street is:

18. THE MASONIC TEMPLE—Headquarters for a number of downtown Masonic lodges. This magnificent structure is of interest to visiting Masons because it is considered one of the best constructed Temples in America.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

19. The district between Meridian Street and Delaware from St. Clair Street north to Fall Creek was at one time the location of the finest houses in Indianapolis. Now "Automobile Row." The lover of the architecture of the eighties and nineties will be repaid for his efforts if he will make a short foray into the region east of Meridian Street.

Here he will find:

20. THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS—One of the most delightfully home-like club houses in the city is located at 13th and Delaware Streets, in a beautiful old residence, made famous by the Indiana author, Booth Tarkington, as the "Amberson Mansion."

21. THE INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM—At 1410 North Delaware Street the Propylaeum, an organization exclusively for women, continues in its present location the active furthering of those aims for which it was founded in 1888.

The next spot of interest that should be visited is:

22. THE MURAT TEMPLE—The shining spire of this Oriental edifice may be seen from every part of the city. The Temple now houses, besides the usual appurtenances of similar buildings, one of the finest and largest theatres and ball rooms in the state. It is located at New Jersey Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

The return to Meridian Street should be made by way of Sixteenth Street, for by this route one passes:

23. THE JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE—Named in honor of the man whose generosity gave it birth. The museum building contains an exceptionally good permanent exhibition of paintings, drawings and etchings, and a creditable collection of sculpture and medallic work. From time to time traveling exhibitions are given space in the galleries and the art lover will find something of interest there whenever he may attend. The faculty of the art school which is run in connection with the museum is composed largely of men and women of national reputation in their respective lines. The John Herron Art School and Museum are located in spacious grounds at 16th and Pennsylvania Streets.

Back on Meridian Street once more, the route lies north until it reaches:

THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

25. THE GOVERNOR'S MANSION—At Delaware Street and Fall Creek Boulevard this lovely, homelike residence of Indiana's chief executive commands a charming vista of beautiful Fall Creek.

At Thirty-eighth Street and Fall Creek Boulevard a left turn brings into view:

26. THE INDIANA STATE FAIR GROUNDS—A park-like property upon which the state has erected permanent exhibition buildings and a race course. Each year in early fall the Indiana State Fair attracts thousands of exhibitors and visitors from this section of the country.

A short drive west on Thirty-eighth Street and Meridian Street is again reached. A right turn and a drive of several miles north past some of the most beautiful residences in the city brings one to:

27. THE CANAL—Like Fall Creek, this water course is spanned by lovely bridges and girdled by boulevards. The canal is about twelve miles long and both takes its source from and empties into White River.

28. CROWN HILL CEMETERY—A few blocks west of Meridian Street on Thirty-eighth is the largest cemetery within the city and the resting place of many famous men including the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

A southerly route on Meridian Street from Thirty-eight Street passes:

29. THE CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS RESIDENCE—The former Vice-President of the United States, a citizen of Indianapolis, made his home in the magnificent mansion located at the southwest corner of Meridian and Thirtieth Streets.

30. INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION—The former Van Camp residence at 28th and Meridian Streets was purchased a few years ago, and converted into national headquarters and executive offices of this organization. No exterior changes have been made in either the building or grounds.

Southward bound on Meridian Street, a right turn again puts one on Fall Creek Boulevard, this time headed west. The route in this direction lies through different territory from that to the east of Meridian Street. St. Vincent's Hospital, one of the gas plants, and the aqueduct which carries the canal over Fall Creek are passed successively. After a short drive replete with views equally interesting, if different, from those seen before, the boulevard curves into one of the drives of:

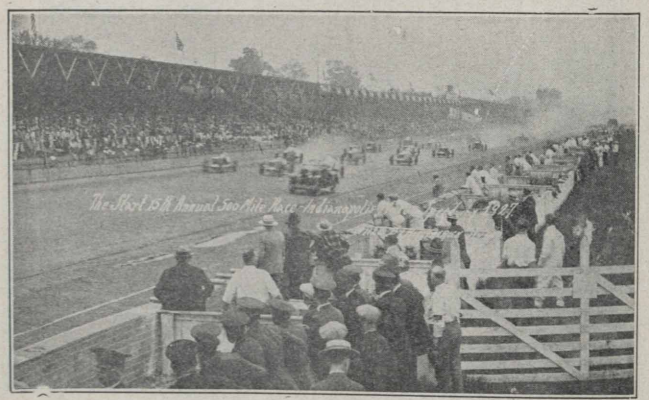
Leaving Riverside, and crossing the river by means of the Emrichsville bridge, a drive of approximately three miles brings one to:

32. THE INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY—The greatest race course in the world. Scene of the annual Five Hundred Mile Classic. This track employs an army of maintenance men to keep it constantly in perfect condition. The Speedway grounds were laid out and the track built in 1909. It is located five miles northwest of the center of the city on the Crawfordsville Road.

Any of the roads leading south from the Speedway will eventually bring one to the National Road which, upon entering the city, becomes West Washington Street. Following this one passes the Insane Hospital, the ball park, and between Senate and Capitol Avenues:



SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

One block from the State House, on the northwest corner of Market and Illinois Streets, is located:

34. THE INDIANAPOLIS TRACTION TERMINAL STATION—This was the first, and it is still the largest interurban railway station in the world. It is the terminus of all electric lines entering Indianapolis, and being only one block from Monument Circle, the beginning, it may as well mark the terminus of this short tour of the city.

35. FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON—Built in 1907 by the Federal Government for use as a regular army post. Excellent quarters for officers and their families, well-kept barracks for enlisted men, a beautiful parade ground and a splendid flying field make this a point of exceptional interest to visitors. Ten miles northeast of the center of the city. Conveniently reached by Massachusetts Avenue and paved State Road No. 67.

INDIANAPOLIS WELCOMES

The Savings and Loan League of Indiana

Presence of the Savings & Loan League of Indiana in the city October 14 and 15 promises to bring forth some very illuminating discussions relative to finances and problems related thereto.

The Savings & Loan League convention, to be held at the Lincoln Hotel, will be attended by approximately 100 delegates from all parts of Indiana.

Officers of the league are Carl J. Weber, Fort Wayne, president; Charles E. Conger, Muncie, first vice president; James E. Pierce, Indianapolis, treasurer; George F. Ogden, Peru, secretary. Members of the executive committee are George H. Padgett, Princeton; Harry V. Somes, Jr., Vincennes; Lew M. O'Bannon, Corydon; Charles H. Schelke, Madison; Ira D. Andrews, Terre Haute; Robert W. Buxton, Shelbyville; Earl P. Ensley, Indianapolis; Charles E. Conger, Muncie; Eugene C. Ashby, Ladoga; J. S. Blackmun, Hammond; William A. Bucher, Huntington; Hugh G. Keegan, Fort Wayne, and Frank M. Boone, South Bend.

Questions of vital importance and of intense interest to all delegates and visitors to the convention will be discussed by an impressive array of experts. Members of the league will appreciate sound views and observations in 1930 even more than they have in the last few years.

It goes without saying, of course, that Indianapolis is proud to act as host for the meeting. The city as a whole and the convention bureau is prepared and eager to do what ever is necessary to make the convention a success and to increase the pleasure of the visitors while they are in the city.

THEATRE AMUSEMENTS

The convention visitor in our city will never lack for amusement. Seventy theatres offer a wide variety of diversion.

College Football in Indianapolis

Butler University

Ohio University ..... Oct. 3
St. Louis University ..... Oct. 17
Haskell Indians ..... Nov. 27

(All games in the Butler bowl, Forty-ninth street and Sunset boulevard. Games played at night, starting at 8 o'clock).

Indiana Central College

Franklin College ..... Oct. 10
State Teachers' College ..... Oct. 17
Manchester College ..... Nov. 8

(Franklin and State Teachers' College games scheduled at night. Manchester game undecided. Games played on athletic field at college located in University Heights southeast of city near Madison road).

An enticing menu of football in Indianapolis and points over the state is ready for serving this fall.

Added to the customary thrill of watching for first downs and touchdowns will be the novelty this season of watching the wearers of moleskins do their stuff under brilliant electric lights. Wabash College introduced night football games at Crawfordsville last year, but this will be Indianapolis' first opportunity to bestow its approval or disapproval on night work for football heroes.

The foregoing schedule holds forth some bitterly fought contests, but for those having special interests in teams outside the city, it will be good news to learn that several of the state's leading institutions are within an easy afternoon's round-trip drive. Indiana at Bloomington, Purdue at Lafayette, DePauw at Greencastle, Franklin at Franklin, Wabash at Crawfordsville, Earlham at Richmond, Ball Teachers' College at Muncie, and Danville Normal at Danville, all are within two hours or less of driving over good paved roads and all are equipped to handle crowds without harassing traffic jams. Notre Dame at South Bend calls for about four hours of driving, but the road is excellent.

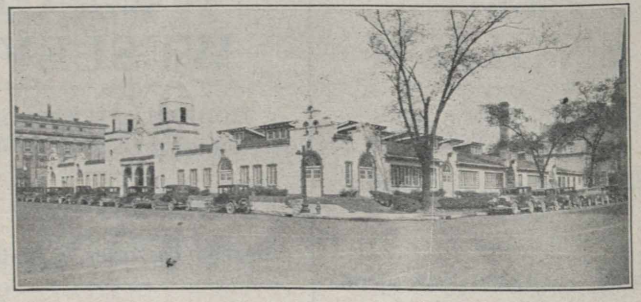
Indianapolis also is represented by some excellent high school football teams, most of whom play their games on Friday afternoon. The Indianapolis newspapers will have latest information on these games.

Other Sports

Boxing bouts, the merit of which has been proved by packed houses for the last three years, are staged under the auspices of the Seventh District American Legion at the Indiana National Guard Armory every Tuesday night. These weekly fights bring together some of the best pugs in the fighting game and fistic fans attending are always guaranteed a real show.

Devotees of the gentle sport of wrestling may satiate their appetites every Monday night at Tomlinson Hall. Bouts which are packed with excitement are staged there under the management of Jimmy McLemore.



CADLE TABERNACLE

Five minutes' walk from the downtown hotel district; annually houses many large conventions and expositions. It contains 40,000 square feet of floor space or seats 10,000 persons.

APOLLO

Farrell Plays "Liliom"

Charles Farrell has a new screen role. In previous Fox Movietone offerings, "Seventh Heaven," "The River," "Sunny Side Up" and "High Society Blues," he played a young French laborer, an engineer and a millionaire.

In "Liliom," which opens October 4 at the Apollo Theatre, he has an unusual part—that of an irresponsible, egoistic and reckless Austrian youngster, a "barker" in a sideshow, who comes to love one of the many girls who pursue him, but who avoids telling her so for fear of "spoiling her."

Frank Borzage directed the picture, a film version of Franz Molnar's famous stage success, "Liliom," with Rose Hobart, H. B. Warner, Estelle Taylor and Lee Tracy in the other featured roles.

Mr. Collins, manager of the Apollo Theatre, has also announced that such productions as "The Big Trail," and Herman Melville's "Moby Dick" will be shown soon. Football fans will be interested to know that Knute Rockne's football series will be shown for six consecutive weeks starting October 4th at the Apollo.

LYRIC

"Rain or Shine", Well-Known Record Breaker, Produced with Joe Cook

"Rain or Shine," which for two seasons broke all records for attendance on Broadway, has been made into a film by Columbia Pictures and it is scheduled to play at the Lyric Theatre on October 4. Joe Cook, who starred in the stage version, plays his original role on the screen. On the stage he scored one of the greatest personal successes it is possible for an actor to achieve.

"Rain or Shine" was written by James Gleason, author of "Is Zat So," "The Shannons of Broadway" and other popular stage and screen hits. The dialogue of this firm of circus life follows most closely the stage version.

Frank Capra, the directorial genius who made "Flight," "Submarine" and "Ladies of Leisure," handled the production.

The cast is of stellar proportions, including such personalities as Louise Fazenda, Joan Peers, William Collier, Jr., Alan Roscoe, Adolph Milar and Clarence Muse.

Here is presented the pick of first run talking pictures, also six acts of Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville on the stage. News reels and short subjects complete the bill. All this is offered at a reasonable admission price. The management also announced the opening of the Lyric ballroom a part of the grand fall opening program on the 20th of September.

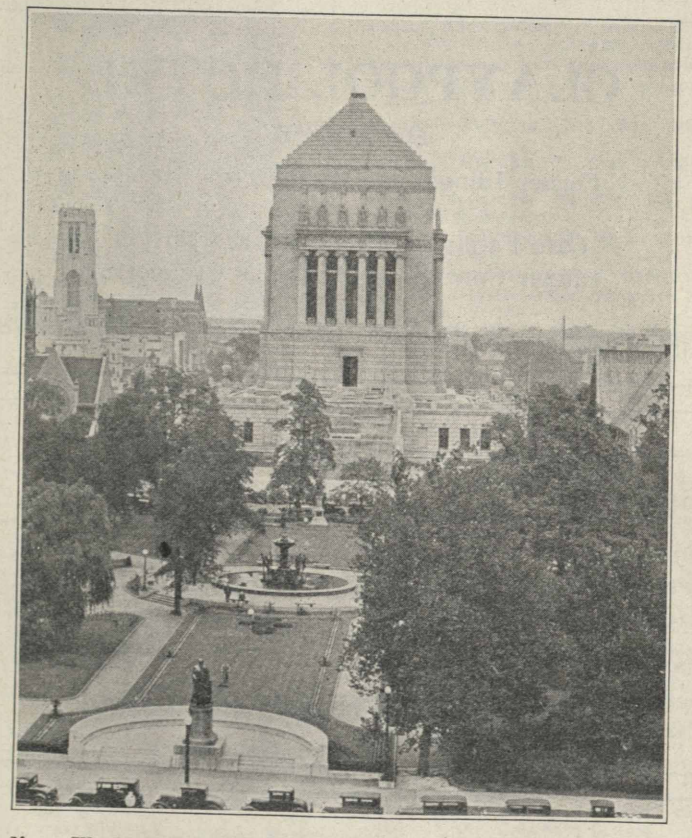
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



Indiana World War Memorial Plaza as seen from Federal Building

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $15,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institution, synonymous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington street route is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

All steam lines leave the Union Station, four blocks south of the monument. All interurban cars leave the Interurban Station, one block west of the Monument. All out-of-city busses leave the Traction Terminal Bus Station or the Union Bus Terminal, two blocks west of the Monument.

THINGS TO SEE

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

On Monument Circle, the second highest shaft in America, and commemorating the memory of Civil and Spanish War veterans. Required fifteen years to build. Cost $600,000. Designed by Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. Statues at base are those of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton. Two sculptoral groups depict War and Peace. Museum is in basement, and observation platform reached by elevator, is at the top. Visitors are welcome.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Indianapolis' "Little Church Around the Corner". Located on the northeast segment of the Circle.

HOTEL ENGLISH

UNITED STATES POSTOFFICE.

Houses also Federal Courts and Offices, is located between Meridian and Pennsylvania, and Ohio and New York Streets, and marks the southern terminus of the Indiana War Memorial Plaza.

INDIANA WAR MEMORIAL PLAZA.

Commemorating the valor of the veterans of the late World War. This Plaza extends five blocks northward from the Postoffice, between Meridian and Pennsylvania Streets. The block north of the Federal Building is University Square. The next is occupied by the Central Shrine. The third by an obelisk surrounded by fountains illuminated at night by varicolored lights and an open terrain for the assembly of vast throngs, and the fourth and fifth by a beautiful park yet to be developed, and the Memorial Building, national and state headquarters of the American Legion, and the Indiana Chapter of the American Red Cross, already completed.

The entire project being developed by the city, county and state, will cost fifteen million dollars. The Central Shrine will cost more than three million dollars. Its interior will be furnished for various auditoriums and reading rooms for patriotic organizations. The open terrain in the block to the north is equipped with loud-speaking equipment and is used for many large public gatherings.

INDIANA STATE CAPITOL

BLACHERNE APARTMENTS

SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL.

Completed in 1927, located on North Meridian Street, between North and Walnut Streets. This masterpiece of old-world architecture has already gained a world-wide reputation for its exterior and interior beauty. It houses the various Scottish Rite bodies of the Valley of Indianapolis, which in point of numbers, ranks fourth among the Scottish Rite bodies of North America, having within the last two years, outdistanced New York City and Detroit. Its Carillon Bells are among the finest in the world. Visitors are welcome during visiting hours.

CENTRAL LIBRARY.

Said to be the most beautiful specimen of Gothic architecture in the United States. Overlooks the Plaza from the north end. It should be seen within to be appreciated. Eighteen branch libraries are scattered throughout the city.

HENRY WARD BEECHER CHURCH.

Second Presbyterian Church, formerly stood on the site now occupied by the Indianapolis Star, New York and Pennsylvania streets. The church now is at Vermont and Pennsylvania Streets, but eventually will be removed from its site at the foot of the War Memorial Shrine.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY'S HOME.

Is at 528 Lockerbie Street, which itself was the subject of one of Mr. Riley's best-known poems. Lockerbie Street runs eastward from 327 East Street or about one-half block north of East New York Street. The Riley home has been preserved as it stood when the famous poet was producing many of his best works and is open to visitors.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HOME.

INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM.

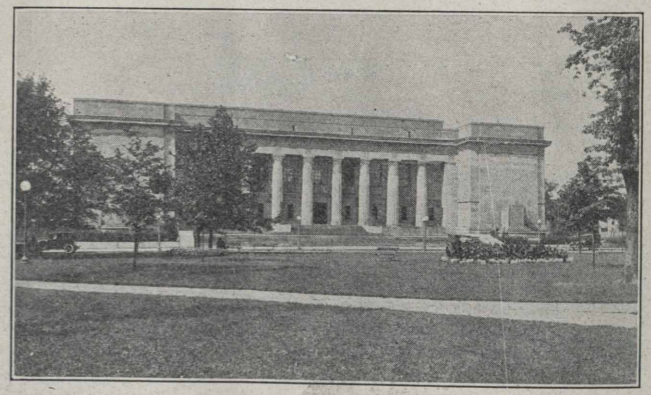
JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE.

Located at Sixteenth and Pennsylvania Streets. A permanent exhibit of paintings, drawings, etchings, sculpture and medallic work may be seen in the building. Works by such people as John Singer Sargent, Cecelia Beaux, Frank W. Benson, Emil Carlsen, William M. Chase, Mary Cassatt, Frank Currier, Childs Hassam, Charles W. Hawthorne, George Inness, W. L. Metcalf, Abbott Thayer and J. Alden Weir.

INDIANA STATE FAIRGROUNDS.

Representing many thousands of dollars in investment, is one of the largest and best institutions of its kind in the country. The annual State Fair is attended by approximately 250,000 people.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

BOOTH TARKINGTON HOME.

Located at 4526 Washington Boulevard. The Indianapolis residence of the famous author. Some of Mr. Tarkington's best-known works are "Penrod", "Seventeen", "The World Does Move", "The Gentleman from Indiana"; "The Flirt"; "Turmoil" and twenty other novels, eleven plays and a number of short stories.

BUTLER UNIVERSITY.

Located on Forty-ninth Street, east of Capitol Avenue, was founded in 1843 and is under the supervision of the Christian Church denomination. Its huge Athletic Stadium, seating 35,000 people, and its Field House, seating 15,000, are among the larger athletic institutions in the country.

CROWN HILL CEMETERY.

CHARLES WARREN FAIRBANKS HOME.

At the southwest corner of Thirtieth and Meridian Streets. Now the home of the Indianapolis Life Insurance Company, but preserved in its original beauty as a memorial to the former Vice President. Visitors are welcome.

INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION.

This international home of the Typographical Union occupies the former beautiful Van Camp estate.

THOMAS TAGGART MEMORIAL.

An impressive colonnade, marking the entrance to Thomas Taggart Park, so-called because the noted Democratic statesman caused the city to acquire the land when he was Mayor twenty-five years ago, and saw it developed into one of the finest city parks in the country.

INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY.

Located on State Road No. 34, immediately outside of the city limits. Is the site of the annual 500-mile speed classic, the outstanding racing event of the world. Built in 1909, a two and a half mile brick oval, has been the proving ground of numerous advances in automotive construction. The race annually is attended by more than 150,000 people from all parts of the world, and during the balance of the year is used as a testing ground for some of the local automobile factories, such as Marmon, Stutz, etc. Visitors are welcome on every day except Sunday.

INDIANA UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER.

SPEEDWAY

The Medical Center includes the celebrated James Whitcomb Riley Memorial Hospital for Children, erected to the memory of the Hoosier Poet. The William H. Coleman Hospital for Women and the Robert W. Long Hospital are others in the Indiana University group.

The Indiana University Medical School and the Training School for Nurses are maintained as an integral part of the University. Organized in 1903, the medical school has been rated in Class A since the first classification of medical schools. The plant of the Medical Center has a valuation of approximately $3,500,000.

INDIANA STATE CAPITOL.

INDIANAPOLIS TERMINAL STATION.

Located at Illinois and Market Streets, is the largest Interurban Railway Station in the world.

INDIANAPOLIS UNION STATION.

THE TOMB OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

GARFIELD PARK.

Located between Shelby street and the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks and south of East Raymond Street, consists of more than 600 acres of beautiful rolling land in the center of which are swimming pools, community buildings, etc. On the east side of the park are the world-famous Sunken Gardens, and the largest municipally-owned Greenhouse in the country. A shrine to the soldiers of the Confederacy who were interned in Indianapolis during the Civil War, is also located at the edge of the Sunken Gardens.

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Is ten miles northeast of the city, on State Road No. 67, and may be reached by paved roads. It was notable as an officers' training camp during the World War, and is now used by the Eleventh Infantry, and the headquarters for the 139th Aerial Observation Squadron. Visitors are always welcome.

MURAT TEMPLE.

Home of the Shrine, at Massachusetts Avenue and New Jersey Streets. It also houses one of the city's finest theaters. The edifice follows an Oriental design throughout and contains an elaborate ballroom.

For Indianapolis

Indianapolis is the capital of the Land Of Opportunity.

Bring your dreams to Indianapolis, the city of vision, a place where dreams come true.

The pulses of the city throb with an energy drawn from the most fruitful soil in all the world.

One hundred years ago destiny marked Indianapolis for steady and triumphant progress. It is the natural center of distribution for North America. Our commerce and industries have a continent for their market. The Indianapolis label guarantees an honest job and an honest price.

From this city of homes James Whitcomb Riley sent winging his songs of light and cheer to gladden the hearts of a nation. The Riley spirit is the Indianapolis spirit of confidence and hope.

This best of cities rests solidly upon the enduring foundation of American liberty under law. By serving my city I serve my country. Each day I will help, not hinder; work, not shirk.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

SECOND OCTOBER ISSUE, 1930

Indiana Education Week

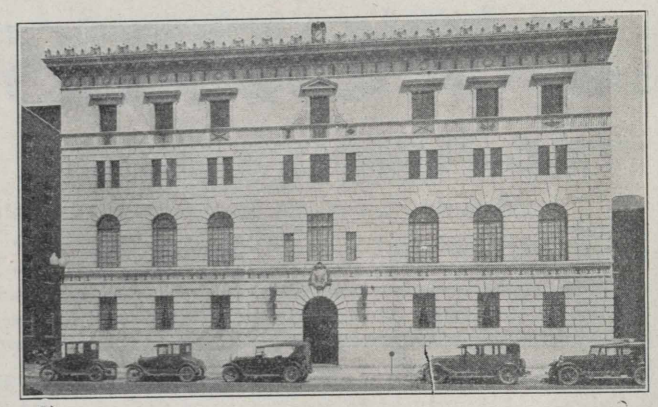
The week of October 13 to 18 might very well be observed by the city of Indianapolis as "Indiana Education Week."

The last three days of that week will bring to the state capital two of the most important associations having to do with public education and instruction. They are the Indiana State Teachers' Association and the Indiana County Superintendents' Association.

Neither association needs any detailed introduction to the citizenry or an involved explanation of the value of the programs to the membership. Successful meetings over a period of years have demonstrated again and again and that discussions of intellectual and practical problems may always be expected and that failure to attend means a direct loss to those who are in a position to be benefited.

There is a saying that no one stands still. A man either progresses or he goes backward. That is demonstrated in these two educational meetings. Those who attend are better fitted to carry on the duties of their positions and their professions. Those who fail to attend fall behind in the ever-changing developments.

Indianapolis takes pride in acting as host to the two meetings. They represent a phase of civilization which affects every home. Their success means advancement for every citizen and Indianapolis always strives to contribute to the success of these sessions. The Indianapolis Convention Bureau will follow its usual custom of aiding in the registration and the housing of more than 15,000 visitors which the meetings will bring to the city.



ARMORY

A new United States Armory, just completed at a cost of $425,000, offers splendid facilities for a large convention. Located at 721 North Pennsylvania Street.

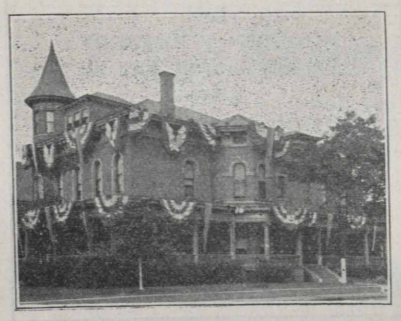
and Danville Normal at Danville, all are within two hours or less of driving over good paved roads and all are equipped to handle crowds without harassing traffic jams. Notre Dame at South Bend calls for about four hours of driving, but the road is excellent.

Indianapolis also is represented by some excellent high school football teams, most of whom play their games on Friday afternoon. The Indianapolis newspapers will have latest information on these games.

Other Sports

Boxing bouts, the merit of which has been proved by packed houses for the last three years, are staged under the auspices of the Seventh District American Legion at the Indiana National Guard Armory every Tuesday night. These weekly fights bring together some of the best pugs in the fighting game and fistic fans attending are always guaranteed a real show.

Devotees of the gentle sport of wrestling may satiate their appetites every Monday night at Tomlinson Hall. Bouts which are packed with excitement are staged there under the management of Jimmy McLemore.



SAHARA GROTTO, the playground of Masonry, owns and operates a wonderful Clubhouse at the southwest corner of Park Ave. and Thirteenth St. A commissary, lunch room, billiard and card rooms, and lounging rooms are open six days each week until 10:00 P. M. for its 4,200 members, all visiting Prophets and brother Masons.

APOLLO

SHARON DIGS HERSELF IN

Sharon Lynn's dark beauty, which has added much to the attractiveness of such Fox Movietones as "Crazy That Way," "Wild Company," and "Man Trouble" is a feature of John Ford's latest directorial offering, "Up the River," opening October 18 at the Apollo Theatre.

The actress plays the role of a gold digger who dug once too often. The story, which looks on the brighter side of life in jail revolves around the attempts of two burglars to promote a romance between two other inmates.

Spencer Tracy and Warren Hymer play the two Cupids, with Claire Luce and Humphrey Bogart as the young lovers.

Mr. Collins, manager of the Apollo Theatre, has also announced that such productions as "The Life of the Party," with Winnie Lightner, and "The Big Trail," with an all star cast, will be shown in successive order. Football enthusiasts will be interested to know that Knute Rockne's Football Series are being shown regularly at the Apollo.

LYRIC

LOWE AND BENNETT FEATURED IN FILM

"Scotland Yard," forceful Fox Movietone drama of an imposter's attempt to usurp another man's place in society, including the affections of his wife, is to have its local premiere showing at the Lyric Theatre beginning October 18.

Edmund Lowe is featured in a dual characterization in which he displays the full range of his celebrated acting ability. As "Dakin Barrolles," notorious thief, he brings to the screen a masterful portrayal of a smooth-working man of the underworld matching his wits with the cunning of Scotland Yard. As "Sir John Lasher," he is the personification of gentlemanly charm, culture and poise.

To Joan Bennett, as "Xandra," wife of "Sir John Lasher," falls the honors of the feminine lead.

Here is presented the pick of first run talking pictures, also six acts of Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville on the stage. News reels and short subjects complete the bill. All this is offered at a reasonable admission price. The management also announced the opening of the Lyric ballroom a part of the grand fall opening program on the 20th of September.

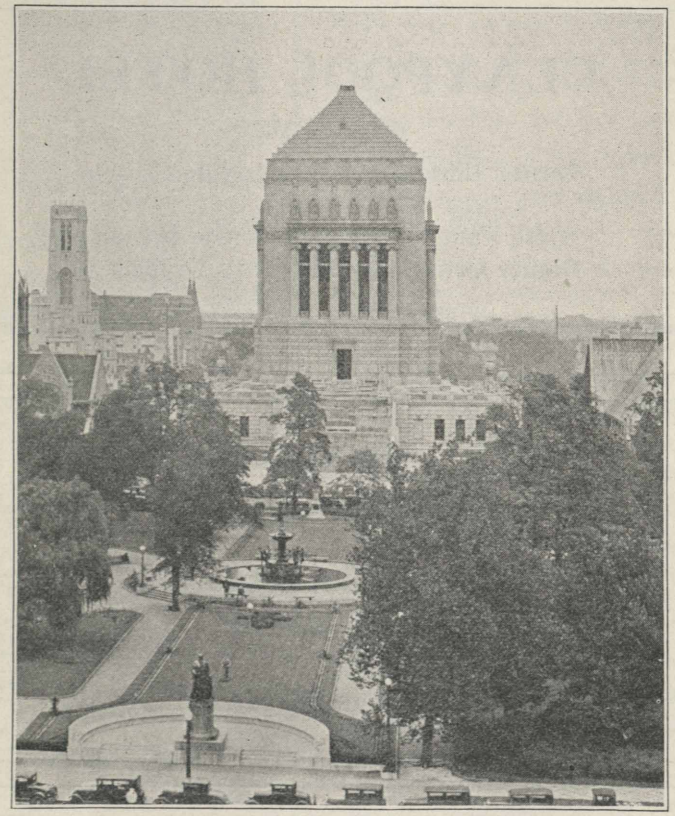
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



Indiana World War Memorial Plaza as seen from Federal Building

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $15,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institution, synonymous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington street route is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

All steam lines leave the Union Station, four blocks south of the monument. All interurban cars leave the Interurban Station, one block west of the Monument. All out-of-city busses leave the Traction Terminal Bus Station or the Union Bus Terminal, two blocks west of the Monument.

THINGS TO SEE

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

On Monument Circle, the second highest shaft in America, and commemorating the memory of Civil and Spanish War veterans. Required fifteen years to build. Cost $600,000. Designed by Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. Statues at base are those of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton. Two sculptoral groups depict War and Peace. Museum is in basement, and observation platform reached by elevator, is at the top. Visitors are welcome.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Indianapolis' "Little Church Around the Corner". Located on the northeast segment of the Circle.

HOTEL ENGLISH

UNITED STATES POSTOFFICE.

Houses also Federal Courts and Offices, is located between Meridian and Pennsylvania, and Ohio and New York Streets, and marks the southern terminus of the Indiana War Memorial Plaza.

INDIANA WAR MEMORIAL PLAZA.

Commemorating the valor of the veterans of the late World War. This Plaza extends five blocks northward from the Postoffice, between Meridian and Pennsylvania Streets. The block north of the Federal Building is University Square. The next is occupied by the Central Shrine. The third by an obelisk surrounded by fountains illuminated at night by varicolored lights and an open terrain for the assembly of vast throngs, and the fourth and fifth by a beautiful park yet to be developed, and the Memorial Building, national and state headquarters of the American Legion, and the Indiana Chapter of the American Red Cross, already completed.

The entire project being developed by the city, county and state, will cost fifteen million dollars. The Central Shrine will cost more than three million dollars. Its interior will be furnished for various auditoriums and reading rooms for patriotic organizations. The open terrain in the block to the north is equipped with loud-speaking equipment and is used for many large public gatherings.

BLACHERNE APARTMENTS

SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL.

Completed in 1927, located on North Meridian Street, between North and Walnut Streets. This masterpiece of old-world architecture has already gained a world-wide reputation for its exterior and interior beauty. It houses the various Scottish Rite bodies of the Valley of Indianapolis, which in point of numbers, ranks fourth among the Scottish Rite bodies of North America, having within the last two years, outdistanced New York City and Detroit. Its Carillon Bells are among the finest in the world. Visitors are welcome during visiting hours.

CENTRAL LIBRARY.

Said to be the most beautiful specimen of Gothic architecture in the United States. Overlooks the Plaza from the north end. It should be seen within to be appreciated. Eighteen branch libraries are scattered throughout the city.

HENRY WARD BEECHER CHURCH.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY'S HOME.

Is at 528 Lockerbie Street, which itself was the subject of one of Mr. Riley's best-known poems. Lockerbie Street runs eastward from 327 East Street or about one-half block north of East New York Street. The Riley home has been preserved as it stood when the famous poet was producing many of his best works and is open to visitors.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HOME.

INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM.

JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE.

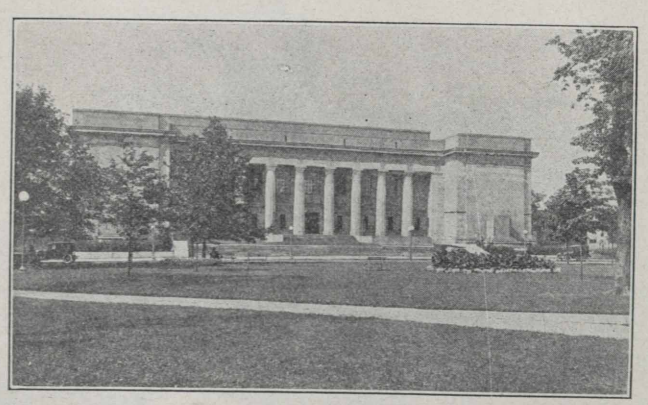
INDIANA STATE FAIRGROUNDS.

Representing many thousands of dollars in investment, is one of the largest and best institutions of its kind in the country. The annual State Fair is attended by approximately 250,000 people.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

BOOTH TARKINGTON HOME.

Located at 4526 Washington Boulevard. The Indianapolis residence of the famous author. Some of Mr. Tarkington's best-known works are "Penrod", "Seventeen", "The World Does Move", "The Gentleman from Indiana"; "The Flirt"; "Turmoil" and twenty other novels, eleven plays and a number of short stories.

BUTLER UNIVERSITY.

Located on Forty-ninth Street, east of Capitol Avenue, was founded in 1843 and is under the supervision of the Christian Church denomination. Its huge Athletic Stadium, seating 35,000 people, and its Field House, seating 15,000, are among the larger athletic institutions in the country.

CROWN HILL CEMETERY.

CHARLES WARREN FAIRBANKS HOME.

At the southwest corner of Thirtieth and Meridian Streets. Now the home of the Indianapolis Life Insurance Company, but preserved in its original beauty as a memorial to the former Vice President. Visitors are welcome.

INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION.

This international home of the Typographical Union occupies the former beautiful Van Camp estate.

THOMAS TAGGART MEMORIAL.

An impressive colonnade, marking the entrance to Thomas Taggart Park, so-called because the noted Democratic statesman caused the city to acquire the land when he was Mayor twenty-five years ago, and saw it developed into one of the finest city parks in the country.

INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY.

Located on State Road No. 34, immediately outside of the city limits. Is the site of the annual 500-mile speed classic, the outstanding racing event of the world. Built in 1909, a two and a half mile brick oval, has been the proving ground of numerous advances in automotive construction. The race annually is attended by more than 150,000 people from all parts of the world, and during the balance of the year is used as a testing ground for some of the local automobile factories, such as Marmon, Stutz, etc. Visitors are welcome on every day except Sunday.

INDIANA UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER.

SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

The Medical Center includes the celebrated James Whitcomb Riley Memorial Hospital for Children, erected to the memory of the Hoosier Poet. The William H. Coleman Hospital for Women and the Robert W. Long Hospital are others in the Indiana University group.

The Indiana University Medical School and the Training School for Nurses are maintained as an integral part of the University. Organized in 1903, the medical school has been rated in Class A since the first classification of medical schools. The plant of the Medical Center has a valuation of approximately $3,500,000.

INDIANA STATE CAPITOL.

INDIANAPOLIS TERMINAL STATION.

Located at Illinois and Market Streets, is the largest Interurban Railway Station in the world.

INDIANAPOLIS UNION STATION.

THE TOMB OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

GARFIELD PARK.

Located between Shelby street and the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks and south of East Raymond Street, consists of more than 600 acres of beautiful rolling land in the center of which are swimming pools, community buildings, etc. On the east side of the park are the world-famous Sunken Gardens, and the largest municipally-owned Greenhouse in the country. A shrine to the soldiers of the Confederacy who were interned in Indianapolis during the Civil War, is also located at the edge of the Sunken Gardens.

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Is ten miles northeast of the city, on State Road No. 67, and may be reached by paved roads. It was notable as an officers' training camp during the World War, and is now used by the Eleventh Infantry, and the headquarters for the 139th Aerial Observation Squadron. Visitors are always welcome.

MURAT TEMPLE.

Home of the Shrine, at Massachusetts Avenue and New Jersey Streets. It also houses one of the city's finest theaters. The edifice follows an Oriental design throughout and contains an elaborate ballroom.

For Indianapolis

Indianapolis is the Capital of the Land of Opportunity.

Bring your dreams to Indianapolis, the city of vision, a place where dreams come true.

The pulses of the city throb with an energy drawn from the most fruitful soil in all the world.

One hundred years ago destiny marked Indianapolis for steady and triumphant progress. It is the natural center of distribution for North America. Our commerce and industries have a continent for their market. The Indianapolis label guarantees an honest job and an honest price.

From this city of homes James Whitcomb Riley sent winging his songs of light and cheer to gladden the hearts of a nation. The Riley spirit is the Indianapolis spirit of confidence and hope.

This best of cities rests solidly upon the enduring foundation of American liberty under law. By serving my city I serve my country. Each day I will help, not hinder; work, not shirk.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

FIRST NOVEMBER ISSUE, 1930

A. B. A. Trust Conference

A meeting of bankers is a matter of interest at any time. With all eyes keenly watching the business barometer as at present, it is particularly vital.

Indianapolis looks forward to the mid-western conference of the trust company division of the American Bankers' Association with a realization that messages will be brought to it which will be of sound benefit to every individual.

An array of trust company officials representing widely separated sections of the nation have been listed as speakers. They will give addresses touching on all phases of the trust company business. Several addresses will contain important information on ways of getting new business.

All sessions of the two-day convention starting November 13 will be held at the Claypool Hotel. Gilbert T. Stephenson, president of the division and vice president of the Equitable Trust Company of Wilmington, Dela., will preside at the opening session. Edmund S. Wolfe, president of the national bank division of the association and president of the First National Bank and Trust Co., of Bridgeport, Conn., will preside at the second session and also at the third session. Mr. Stephenson will preside again at the fourth session.

The annual banquet will be held in the Riley room on the evening of the closing day. Francis H. Sisson, second vice president of the American Bankers' Association, will be the speaker.

Indiana bankers anticipate this opportunity to acquaint themselves further with trust problems, and the city of Indianapolis is distinctly conscious of the honor the trust division has conferred by coming to this city for the convention.

THEATRE AMUSEMENTS

College Football in Indianapolis

	Butler University
Ohio University	Oct. 3
St. Louis University	Oct. 17
Haskell Indians	Nov. 27

(All games in the Butler bowl, Forty-ninth street and Sunset boulevard. Games played at night, starting at 8 o'clock).

	Indiana Central College
Franklin College	Oct. 10
State Teachers' College	Oct. 17
Manchester College	Nov. 8

(Franklin and State Teachers' College games scheduled at night. Manchester game undecided. Games played on athletic field at college located in University Heights southeast of city near Madison road).

An enticing menu of football in Indianapolis and points over the state is ready for serving this fall.

Added to the customary thrill of watching for first downs and touchdowns will be the novelty this season of watching the wearers of moleskins do their stuff under brilliant electric lights. Wabash College introduced night football games at Crawfordsville last year, but this will be Indianapolis' first opportunity to bestow its approval or disapproval on night work for football heroes.

The foregoing schedule holds forth some bitterly fought contests, but for those having special interests in teams outside the city, it will be good news to learn that several of the state's leading institutions are within an easy afternoon's round-trip drive. Indiana at Bloomington, Purdue at Lafayette, DePauw at Greencastle, Franklin at Franklin, Wabash at Crawfordsville, Earlham at Richmond, Ball Teachers' College at Muncie.

SEATS NOW AT BOX OFFICE
GALA WEEK

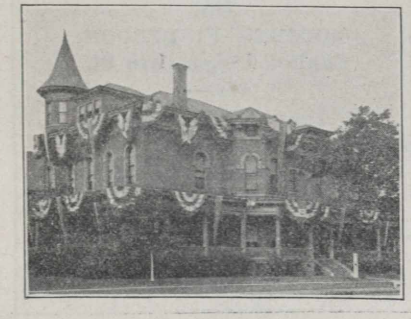
Heralded as an event of International importance is the the new Fred Stone musical extravaganza "Ripples," sponsored by that famous producer, Charles Dillingham.

"Ripples" is scheduled for one week's showing at the English Theatre, beginning Monday, November 3, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

This will be Fred Stone's first appearance in Indianapolis since his serious airplane accident two years ago, and will show us a better Stone and many new tricks that he has practiced during his stay at the hospital, his comeback will prove indeed marvelous to many who are more intimately acquainted with this noted actor.

His daughter Dorothy is co-starred, and daughter number two, Paula Stone, will make her local stage debut in this production. Daughter number three, Carol, is to appear in Fred Stone's next production.

The big list of names does not stop there for we find the familiar name of Andrew Tombes, Billy Taylor, Hilda Spong, Cynthia Foley, Charles Collins, Charles Mast, Peggy Bancroft, W. J. McCarthy, William Kerschell, Gertrude Clemens, a troupe of Midgets, John Tiller's sensational dancing girls, and an ensemble of male and female singers.



SAHARA GROTTO, the playground of Masonry, owns and operates a wonderful Clubhouse at the southwest corner of Park Ave. and Thirteenth St. A commissary, lunch room, billiard and card rooms, and lounging rooms are open six days each week until 10:00 P. M. for its 4,200 members, all visiting Prophets and brother Masons.

Joe E. Brown portrays a "has been" football star in "Maybe It's Love," the Warner Bros. newest Vitaphone production, which is coming to the Apollo Theatre, on November 15th.

Brown, who enacted the lazy prize-fighter in "Hold Everything," has switched his rare comedy antics from the squared circle to the gridiron in this collegiate comedy-drama, in which he plays a pigskin star forced to warm the substitutes bench when some real players come to his college.

James Hall and eleven "all-American" gridiron stars, chosen from among the greatest football talent in the country, are seen in action on the field. The blonde and charming Joan Bennett portrays the feminine lead and proves to be the magnet which draws the football stars to her Alma Mater's campus. William Wellman directed "Maybe It's Love" which is adapted from Mark Canfield's stage play, Joseph Jackson did the scenario.

Several brand new college songs and other tuneful melodies are heard in the production.

LYRIC

"AFRICA SPEAKS" ABSORBING FILM OF JUNGLE LIFE

Thrilling and rare entertainment occupied the screen of the Lyric Theatre last night where "Africa Speaks," an African adventure film with sound effects opened for a week's run. This film, released by Columbia Pictures, depicts the absorbing adventures of Paul L. Hoefler, Colorado explorer, on a daring trip through the hitherto unexplored regions of the dark continent. From a scenic standpoint it is magnificent, while the intimate glimpses of native life are fascinating from a news value.

Apparently Hoefler and his courageous band managed to penetrate into the deepest jungles of the big continent. Practically every type of native is shown—from the giant Wasara of the French Congo, to the pygmies of the Ituri forest, who seldom reach a height of fifty-seven inches. Religious rites and tribal dances of these natives are among the features of the production. Many of their customs, heretofore a mystery, are revealed.

Here is presented the pick of first run talking pictures, also six acts of Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville and a variety of short subjects and news reels complete the bill.

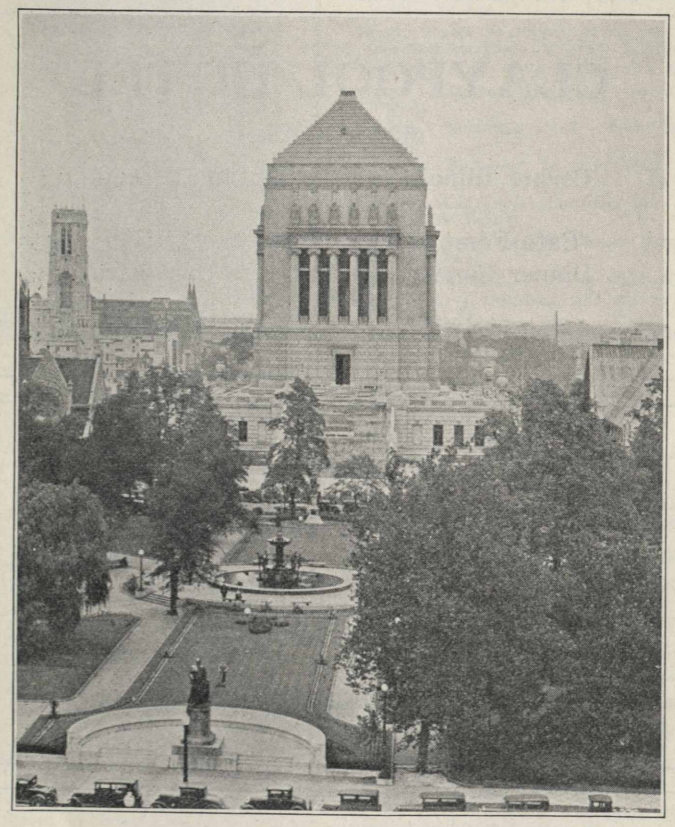
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



Indiana World War Memorial Plaza as seen from Federal Building

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $15,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institution, synonymous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

HOW TO GET ABOUT THE CITY

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington street route is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

All steam lines leave the Union Station, four blocks south of the monument. All interurban cars leave the Interurban Station, one block west of the Monument. All out-of-city busses leave the Traction Terminal Bus Station or the Union Bus Terminal, two blocks west of the Monument.

THINGS TO SEE

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

On Monument Circle, the second highest shaft in America, and commemorating the memory of Civil and Spanish War veterans. Required fifteen years to build. Cost $600,000. Designed by Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. Statues at base are those of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton. Two sculptoral groups depict War and Peace. Museum is in basement, and observation platform reached by elevator, is at the top. Visitors are welcome.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Indianapolis' "Little Church Around the Corner". Located on the northeast segment of the Circle.

HOTEL ENGLISH

UNITED STATES POSTOFFICE.

Houses also Federal Courts and Offices, is located between Meridian and Pennsylvania, and Ohio and New York Streets, and marks the southern terminus of the Indiana War Memorial Plaza.

INDIANA WAR MEMORIAL PLAZA.

Commemorating the valor of the veterans of the late World War. This Plaza extends five blocks northward from the Postoffice, between Meridian and Pennsylvania Streets. The block north of the Federal Building is University Square. The next is occupied by the Central Shrine. The third by an obelisk surrounded by fountains illuminated at night by varicolored lights and an open terrain for the assembly of vast throngs, and the fourth and fifth by a beautiful park yet to be developed, and the Memorial Building, national and state headquarters of the American Legion, and the Indiana Chapter of the American Red Cross, already completed.

The entire project being developed by the city, county and state, will cost fifteen million dollars. The Central Shrine will cost more than three million dollars. Its interior will be furnished for various auditoriums and reading rooms for patriotic organizations. The open terrain in the block to the north is equipped with loud-speaking equipment and is used for many large public gatherings.

BLACHERNE APARTMENTS

SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL.

Completed in 1927, located on North Meridian Street, between North and Walnut Streets. This masterpiece of old-world architecture has already gained a world-wide reputation for its exterior and interior beauty. It houses the various Scottish Rite bodies of the Valley of Indianapolis, which in point of numbers, ranks fourth among the Scottish Rite bodies of North America, having within the last two years, outdistanced New York City and Detroit. Its Carillon Bells are among the finest in the world. Visitors are welcome during visiting hours.

CENTRAL LIBRARY.

Said to be the most beautiful specimen of Gothic architecture in the United States. Overlooks the Plaza from the north end. It should be seen within to be appreciated. Eighteen branch libraries are scattered throughout the city.

HENRY WARD BEECHER CHURCH.

Second Presbyterian Church, formerly stood on the site now occupied by the Indianapolis Star, New York and Pennsylvania streets. The church now is at Vermont and Pennsylvania Streets, but eventually will be removed from its site at the foot of the War Memorial Shrine.

THE TOMB OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

GARFIELD PARK.

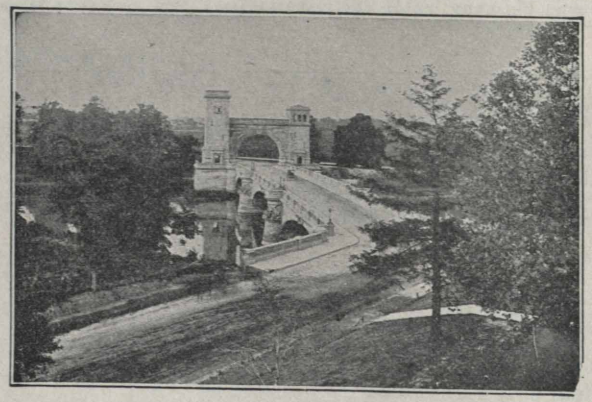
Located between Shelby street and the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks and south of East Raymond Street, consists of more than 600 acres of beautiful rolling land in the center of which are swimming pools, community buildings, etc. On the east side of the park are the world-famous Sunken Gardens, and the largest municipally-owned Greenhouse in the country. A shrine to the soldiers of the Confederacy who were interned in Indianapolis during the Civil War, is also located at the edge of the Sunken Gardens.

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Is ten miles northeast of the city, on State Road No. 67, and may be reached by paved roads. It was notable as an officers' training camp during the World War, and is now used by the Eleventh Infantry, and the headquarters for the 139th Aerial Observation Squadron. Visitors are always welcome.

MURAT TEMPLE.

Home of the Shrine, at Massachusetts Avenue and New Jersey Streets. It also houses one of the city's finest theaters. The edifice follows an Oriental design throughout and contains an elaborate ballroom.



THE EMRICHSVILLE BRIDGE

To Cincinnati by Parlor Car and Motor Coach

Passengers traveling to Cincinnati have the added advantage of riding in both parlor cars and deluxe motor coaches, under an arrangement recently inaugurated by the Indianapolis and Southeastern Lines, at a very nominal fare.

The company's parlor cars leave the local Traction Terminal Station, located at Illinois and Market streets, at 7:00 A. M., 12:00 Noon, and 3:00 P. M. Direct connections is made at Greensburg with the company's large motor coaches, which leave immediately for the Queen City.

Towns served along this route include Shelbyville, Greensburg, Batesville, Sunman, Manchester, Aurora and Lawrenceburg. The Cincinnati depot is located in the heart of the downtown district at Eighth and Walnut streets. The leaving time from Cincinnati is 7:00 and 10:00 A. M., 2:00 and 5:25 P. M. (Eastern Standard Time).

For Indianapolis

Indianapolis is the Capital of the Land of Opportunity.

Bring your dreams to Indianapolis, the city of vision, a place where dreams come true.

The pulses of the city throb with an energy drawn from the most fruitful soil in all the world.

One hundred years ago destiny marked Indianapolis for steady and triumphant progress. It is the natural center of distribution for North America. Our commerce and industries have a continent for their market. The Indianapolis label guarantees an honest job and an honest price.

From this city of homes James Whitcomb Riley sent winging his songs of light and cheer to gladden the hearts of a nation. The Riley spirit is the Indianapolis spirit of confidence and hope.

This best of cities rests solidly upon the enduring foundation of American liberty under law. By serving my city I serve my country. Each day I will help, not hinder; work, not shirk.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

SECOND NOVEMBER ISSUE, 1930

Indianapolis Welcomes Several Outstanding Fall Conventions

Despite the usual break that comes with the Thanksgiving holiday period, the last half of November will bring several important conventions and meetings to Indianapolis.

Among these is the sixteenth semi-annual meeting of the Indiana Association of Personal Finance Companies. Approximately 100 leaders in this growing business will come to the city to hear a series of important addresses and round-table discussions.

Sessions will be held at the Lincoln Hotel, starting at 10 o'clock in the morning of November 19 and continuing until 3:30 o'clock that afternoon. Programs will be staged in the Lincoln room. Speakers will be George W. Farrington of the Commonwealth Loan Company, I. Glosson of the Lincoln Loan Company, E. J. Franck of the Beneficial Loan Society, Charles R. Parker of the state banking department, F. E. Jurgensmeier of the Household Finance Company, Ralph Scheidler of the Security Investment & Loan Co., and Roy F. Hartz of the American Loan Company.

Starting on November 20 the Indiana Canners' Association will meet with an attendance of 300. Other important meetings include the Indiana Independent Order of Odd Fellows, attendance 1,000; the commanders and adjutants of the American Legion, attendance 150; president and secretaries of the Legion, attendance fifty; Daughters of Isabella of Indiana, attendance sixty-five; Indiana Farm Bureau Federation, attendance 500; and Central States Bowlers' Association, attendance 1,500. Indianapolis cordially welcomes all these visitors.

THEATRE AMUSEMENTS

SPORTS

College Football in Indianapolis

Butler University

Ohio University	Oct. 3
St. Louis University	Oct. 17
Haskell Indians	Nov. 27

(All games in the Butler bowl, Forty-ninth street and Sunset boulevard. Games played at night, starting at 8 o'clock).

Indiana Central College

Franklin College	Oct. 10
State Teachers' College	Oct. 17
Manchester College	Nov. 8

(Franklin and State Teachers' College games scheduled at night. Manchester game undecided. Games played on athletic field at college located in University Heights southeast of city near Madison road).

An enticing menu of football in Indianapolis and points over the state is ready for serving this fall.

Added to the customary thrill of watching for first downs and touchdowns will be the novelty this season of watching the wearers of moleskins do their stuff under brilliant electric lights. Wabash College introduced night football games at Crawfordsville last year, but this will be Indianapolis' first opportunity to bestow its approval or disapproval on night work for football heroes.

The foregoing schedule holds forth some bitterly fought contests, but for those having special interests in teams outside the city, it will be good news to learn that several of the state's leading institutions are within an easy afternoon's round-trip drive. Indiana at Bloomington, Purdue at Lafayette, DePauw at Greencastle, Franklin at Franklin, Wabash at Crawfordsville, Earlham at Richmond, Ball Teachers' College at Muncie, and Danville Normal at Danville, all are within two hours or less of driving over good paved roads and all are equipped to handle crowds without harassing traffic jams. Notre Dame at South Bend calls for about four hours of driving, but the road is excellent.

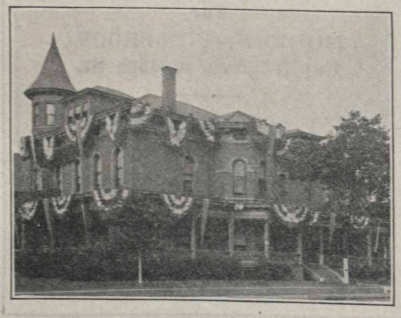
Indianapolis also is represented by some excellent high school football teams, most of whom play their games on Friday afternoon. The Indianapolis newspapers will have latest information on these games.

Other Sports

Boxing bouts, the merit of which has been proved by packed houses for the last three years, are staged under the auspices of the Seventh District American Legion at the Indiana National Guard Armory every Tuesday night. These weekly fights bring together some of the best pugs in the fighting game and fistic fans attending are always guaranteed a real show.

Devotees of the gentle sport of wrestling may satiate their appetites every Monday night at Tomlinson Hall. Bouts which are packed with excitement are staged there under the management of Jimmy McLemore.



SAHARA GROTTO, the playground of Masonry, owns and operates a wonderful Clubhouse at the southwest corner of Park Ave. and Thirteenth St. A commissary, lunch room, billiard and card rooms, and lounging rooms are open six days each week until 10:00 P. M. for its 4,200 members, all visiting Prophets and brother Masons.

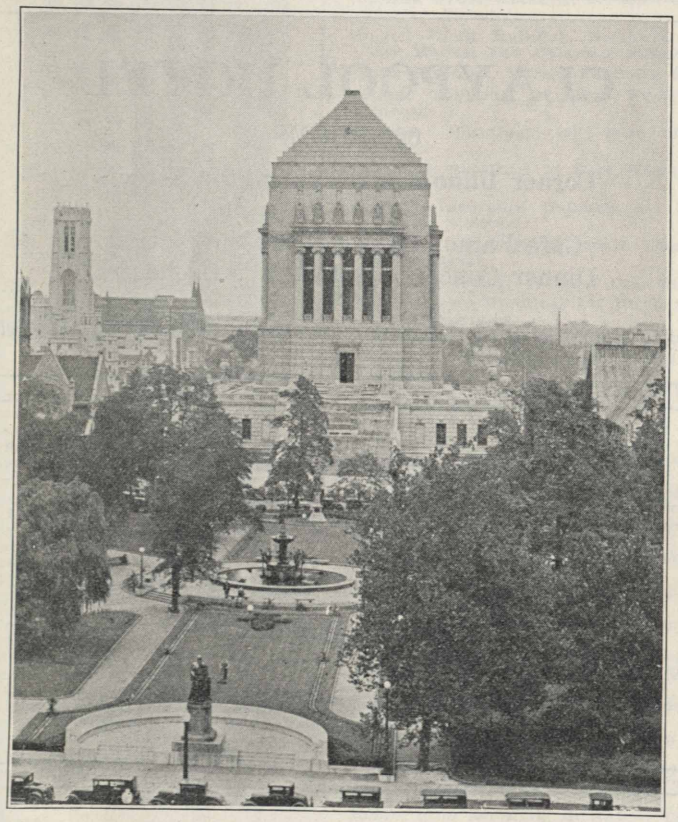
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



Indiana World War Memorial Plaza as seen from Federal Building

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $15,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

LOOKING WEST ON MARKET STREET

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington street route is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

All steam lines leave the Union Station, four blocks south of the monument. All interurban cars leave the Interurban Station, one block west of the Monument. All out-of-city busses leave the Traction Terminal Bus Station or the Union Bus Terminal, two blocks west of the Monument.

THINGS TO SEE

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

On Monument Circle, the second highest shaft in America, and commemorating the memory of Civil and Spanish War veterans. Required fifteen years to build. Cost $600,000. Designed by Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. Statues at base are those of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton. Two sculptoral groups depict War and Peace. Museum is in basement, and observation platform reached by elevator, is at the top. Visitors are welcome.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Indianapolis' "Little Church Around the Corner". Located on the northeast segment of the Circle.

HOTEL ENGLISH

Located immediately across the street from Christ Church, is an early landmark and now a modern hotel.

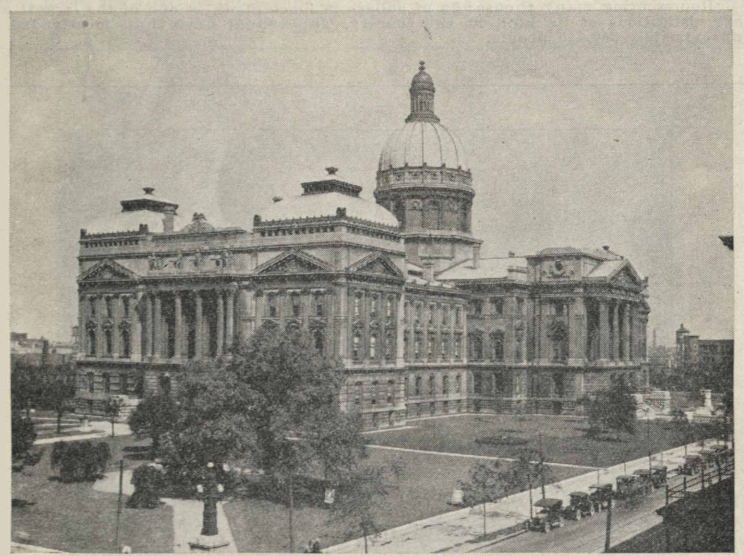
UNITED STATES POSTOFFICE.

Houses also Federal Courts and Offices, is located between Meridian and Pennsylvania, and Ohio and New York Streets, and marks the southern terminus of the Indiana War Memorial Plaza.

INDIANA WAR MEMORIAL PLAZA.

Commemorating the valor of the veterans of the late World War. This Plaza extends five blocks northward from the Postoffice, between Meridian and Pennsylvania Streets. The block north of the Federal Building is University Square. The next is occupied by the Central Shrine. The third by an obelisk surrounded by fountains illuminated at night by varicolored lights and an open terrain for the assembly of vast throngs, and the fourth and fifth by a beautiful park yet to be developed, and the Memorial Building, national and state headquarters of the American Legion, and the Indiana Chapter of the American Red Cross, already completed.

The entire project being developed by the city, county and state, will cost fifteen million dollars. The Central Shrine will cost more than three million dollars. Its interior will be furnished for various auditoriums and reading rooms for patriotic organizations. The open terrain in the block to the north is equipped with loud-speaking equipment and is used for many large public gatherings.



INDIANA STATE CAPITOL

BLACHERNE APARTMENTS

SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL.

Completed in 1927, located on North Meridian Street, between North and Walnut Streets. This masterpiece of old-world architecture has already gained a world-wide reputation for its exterior and interior beauty. It houses the various Scottish Rite bodies of the Valley of Indianapolis, which in point of numbers, ranks fourth among the Scottish Rite bodies of North America, having within the last two years, outdistanced New York City and Detroit. Its Carillon Bells are among the finest in the world. Visitors are welcome during visiting hours.

CENTRAL LIBRARY.

Said to be the most beautiful specimen of Gothic architecture in the United States. Overlooks the Plaza from the north end. It should be seen within to be appreciated. Eighteen branch libraries are scattered throughout the city.

HENRY WARD BEECHER CHURCH.

Second Presbyterian Church, formerly stood on the site now occupied by the Indianapolis Star, New York and Pennsylvania streets. The church now is at Vermont and Pennsylvania Streets, but eventually will be removed from its site at the foot of the War Memorial Shrine.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY'S HOME.

Is at 528 Lockerbie Street, which itself was the subject of one of Mr. Riley's best-known poems. Lockerbie Street runs eastward from 327 East Street or about one-half block north of East New York Street. The Riley home has been preserved as it stood when the famous poet was producing many of his best works and is open to visitors.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HOME.

INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM.

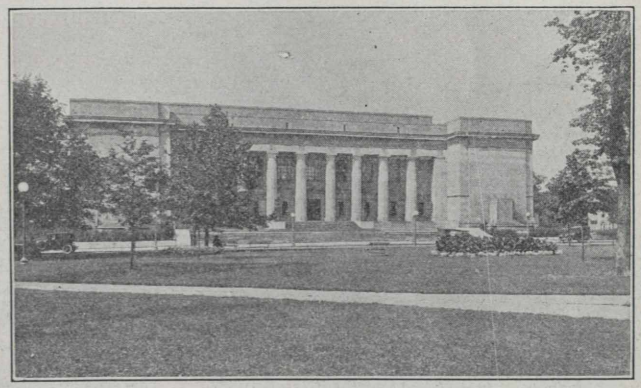
JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE.

Located at Sixteenth and Pennsylvania Streets. A permanent exhibit of paintings, drawings, etchings, sculpture and medallic work may be seen in the building. Works by such people as John Singer Sargent, Cecelia Beaux, Frank W. Benson, Emil Carlsen, William M. Chase, Mary Cassatt, Frank Currier, Childs Hassam, Charles W. Hawthorne, George Inness, W. L. Metcalf, Abbott Thayer and J. Alden Weir.

INDIANA STATE FAIRGROUNDS.

Representing many thousands of dollars in investment, is one of the largest and best institutions of its kind in the country. The annual State Fair is attended by approximately 250,000 people.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

BOOTH TARKINGTON HOME.

Located at 4526 Washington Boulevard. The Indianapolis residence of the famous author. Some of Mr. Tarkington's best-known works are "Penrod", "Seventeen", "The World Does Move", "The Gentleman from Indiana"; "The Flirt"; "Turmoil" and twenty other novels, eleven plays and a number of short stories.

BUTLER UNIVERSITY.

Located on Forty-ninth Street, east of Capitol Avenue, was founded in 1843 and is under the supervision of the Christian Church denomination. Its huge Athletic Stadium, seating 35,000 people, and its Field House, seating 15,000, are among the larger athletic institutions in the country.

CROWN HILL CEMETERY.

Located on West Thirty-fourth Street, is the fifth largest cemetery in the world, and the burial place of many famous men, including James Whitcomb Riley, Senator Albert J. Beveridge, President Benjamin Harrison, Vice President Charles Warren Fairbanks, Thomas Taggart, Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, Senator John W. Kern and Governor Oliver P. Morton.

CHARLES WARREN FAIRBANKS HOME.

At the southwest corner of Thirtieth and Meridian Streets. Now the home of the Indianapolis Life Insurance Company, but preserved in its original beauty as a memorial to the former Vice President. Visitors are welcome.

INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION.

This international home of the Typographical Union occupies the former beautiful Van Camp estate.

THOMAS TAGGART MEMORIAL.

An impressive colonnade, marking the entrance to Thomas Taggart Park, so-called because the noted Democratic statesman caused the city to acquire the land when he was Mayor twenty-five years ago, and saw it developed into one of the finest city parks in the country.

INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY.

Located on State Road No. 34, immediately outside of the city limits. Is the site of the annual 500-mile speed classic, the outstanding racing event of the world. Built in 1909, a two and a half mile brick oval, has been the proving ground of numerous advances in automotive construction. The race annually is attended by more than 150,000 people from all parts of the world, and during the balance of the year is used as a testing ground for some of the local automobile factories, such as Marmon, Stutz, etc. Visitors are welcome on every day except Sunday.

INDIANA UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER.

SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

The Medical Center includes the celebrated James Whitcomb Riley Memorial Hospital for Children, erected to the memory of the Hoosier Poet. The William H. Coleman Hospital for Women and the Robert W. Long Hospital are others in the Indiana University group.

The Indiana University Medical School and the Training School for Nurses are maintained as an integral part of the University. Organized in 1903, the medical school has been rated in Class A since the first classification of medical schools. The plant of the Medical Center has a valuation of approximately $3,500,000.

INDIANA STATE CAPITOL.

Located at Washington Street and Capitol Avenue, houses all state governmental offices. The state museum located on the first floor is open to visitors.

INDIANAPOLIS TERMINAL STATION.

Located at Illinois and Market Streets, is the largest Interurban Railway Station in the world.

INDIANAPOLIS UNION STATION.

Where 165 trains arrive and depart to all parts of the nation daily, is the first Union Railroad Station ever created. Located on South Illinois and McCrea Place.

THE TOMB OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

GARFIELD PARK.

Located between Shelby street and the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks and south of East Raymond Street, consists of more than 600 acres of beautiful rolling land in the center of which are swimming pools, community buildings, etc. On the east side of the park are the world-famous Sunken Gardens, and the largest municipally-owned Greenhouse in the country. A shrine to the soldiers of the Confederacy who were interned in Indianapolis during the Civil War, is also located at the edge of the Sunken Gardens.

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Is ten miles northeast of the city, on State Road No. 67, and may be reached by paved roads. It was notable as an officers' training camp during the World War, and is now used by the Eleventh Infantry, and the headquarters for the 139th Aerial Observation Squadron. Visitors are always welcome.

MURAT TEMPLE.

Home of the Shrine, at Massachusetts Avenue and New Jersey Streets. It also houses one of the city's finest theaters. The edifice follows an Oriental design throughout and contains an elaborate ballroom.

For Indianapolis

Indianapolis is the Capital of the Land of Opportunity.

Bring your dreams to Indianapolis, the city of vision, a place where dreams come true.

The pulses of the city throb with an energy drawn from the most fruitful soil in all the world.

One hundred years ago destiny marked Indianapolis for steady and triumphant progress. It is the natural center of distribution for North America. Our commerce and industries have a continent for their market. The Indianapolis label guarantees an honest job and an honest price.

From this city of homes James Whitcomb Riley sent winging his songs of light and cheer to gladden the hearts of a nation. The Riley spirit is the Indianapolis spirit of confidence and hope.

This best of cities rests solidly upon the enduring foundation of American liberty under law. By serving my city I serve my country. Each day I will help, not hinder; work, not shirk.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

FIRST DECEMBER ISSUE, 1930

A Convention a Day

Will Feature Holiday Season

In the parlance of the circus gentry, there will be something doing every minute during the first fifteen days of December. Eighteen conventions will come to Indianapolis for sessions that will attract from fifty to four hundred visitors for each meeting.

Two outstanding conventions will be those of the Indiana Petroleum Association and the Indiana Manufacturers of Dairy Products. The former, a two-day meeting to be held on December 4 and 5, will be attended by 150. The latter also is a two-day meeting scheduled for December 10 and 11 and will draw 145 delegates and visitors. The Severin Hotel will entertain the Petroleum Association and the Hotel Lincoln will be host to the Dairy Products Association.

Other meetings scheduled are: Indiana Fruit Growers' Association, attendance fifty; Indiana County and Township Assessors' Association, fifty; Hoosier Association of Finance Companies, fifty; Central States Forestry Congress, fifty; Indiana Implement Dealers' Association, 400; Motor Truck Association of Indiana, Inc., 100; Indiana Society for Mental Hygiene, 300; Indiana Highway Constructors' Association, seventy-five; Indiana Township Trustees' Association, 200; Indiana Academy of Ophthalmology and Oto-Laryngology, seventy-five; Indiana State Beekeepers' Association, 100; Indiana History Conference, 100; Sigma Chi Fraternity, province meeting, 100; Equitable Life Assurance Society of Indiana, 150; Indiana Hotel Association, 150; and the Indiana Commercial Organization, fifty.

Visitors to these meetings will find Indianapolis in the full flush of the holiday spirit—a spirit which it has for its guests throughout the year.

THEATRE AMUSEMENTS

The convention visitor in our city will never lack for amusement. Seventy theatres offer a wide variety of diversion.

Even if the visitor to Indiana and Indianapolis does not care for basketball as a sport, he will miss a unique sight if he does not witness first hand the tremendous enthusiasm the game incites among native Hoosiers.

Basketball is to Indiana what bull fights are to Spain, but there is a reason. It is the center of the world's best basketball. Whether this has resulted from the excitement it inspires, or whether the excitement is a result of the high quality of the product has never been figured out.

The fact remains that two years ago Butler University won recognition as a national champion in the sport and its prestige was only slightly dimmed last year. It displays its wares in one of the most modern athletic plants in the country, a structure of 15,000 seating capacity which in itself is a sight worth seeing. The widely scattered opponents which Butler meets this year is evidence of the reputation it enjoys. Four of these opponents, Alabama, Arkansas, Louisville and Western State are champions of their respective conferences.

ARMORY

A new United States Armory, just completed at a cost of $425,000, offers splendid facilities for a large convention. Located at 721 North Pennsylvania Street.

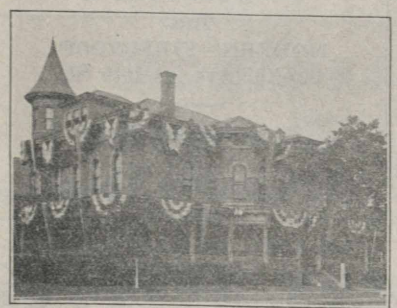
Indiana Central College also has been a consistent producer of fast, smooth working quintets. It doesn't attempt to travel in quite as rapid company as Butler, but it is a top-notcher in its own circuit. The University Heights cavorters will present some heated battles that should be great drawing cards. Both Butler and Indiana Central may be reached with ease, either by automobile or by bus from Monument Circle.

Other Sports

Boxing bouts, the merit of which has been proved by packed houses for the last three years, are staged under the auspices of the Seventh District American Legion at the Indiana National Guard Armory every Tuesday night. These weekly fights bring together some of the best pugs in the fighting game and fistic fans attending are always guaranteed a real show.

Devotees of the gentle sport of wrestling may satiate their appetites every Monday night at Tomlinson Hall. Bouts which are packed with excitement are staged there under the management of Jimmy McLemore.



SAHARA GROTTO, the playground of Masonry, owns and operates a wonderful Clubhouse at the southwest corner of Park Ave. and Thirteenth St. A commissary, lunch room, billiard and card rooms, and lounging rooms are open six days each week until 10:00 P. M. for its 4,200 members, all visiting Prophets and brother Masons.

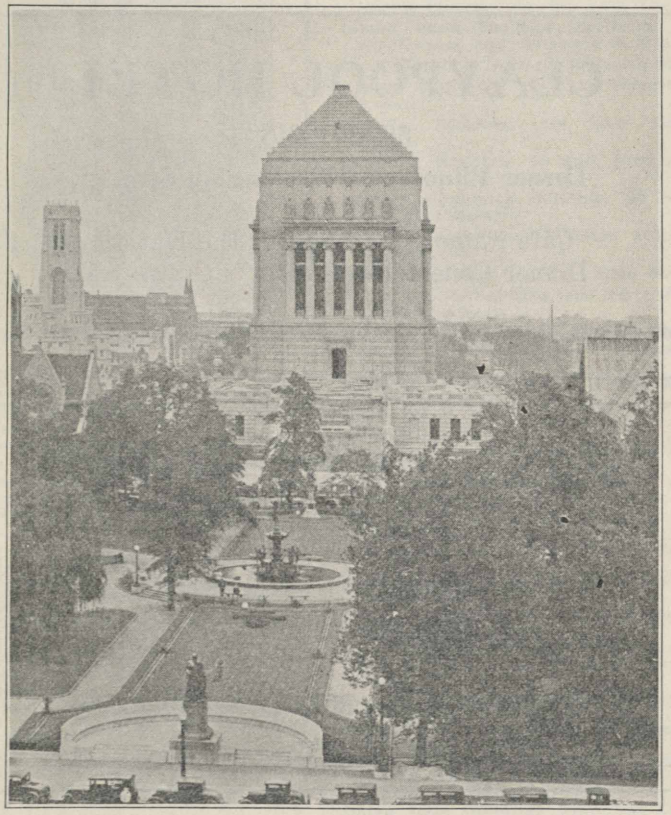
THE INDIANA WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Recognized throughout the world as the most outstanding and gigantic enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, Indianapolis points to the Indiana World War Memorial (now in the process of building) with the greatest of pride. Conceived in honor of Indiana's participation in the World War, this memorial will cover five entire city blocks in the very heart of the downtown district of the city. The finished plaza, pictured below, will be bounded on the far end by the Indianapolis Public Library building, and on the other by the Federal Court House and Postoffice building.



Indiana World War Memorial Plaza as seen from Federal Building

These extremity structures, in Indiana limestone, as well as numbers of other buildings, including the impressive Chamber of Commerce building flanking either side of the plaza, will lend harmony to the limestone central shrine, American Legion building and other structures within the edifice itself. Costing over $15,000,000 in its entirety, the expense of the project is borne by the city, state and county. Building is progressing as the necessary revenue is received and the plaza will be completed in 1933.

Diversified hotel facilities centrally located have been a prominent factor in Indianapolis' steady progress as a convention center.

To the old established institution, synonymous with the name of the Hoosier capital and as well known throughout the length and breadth of the nation, have been added in recent years new hostelries which rapidly are attaining fame for their equipment and service at rates that are exceedingly moderate.

Cordial welcomes for convention visitors as well as for the established run of guests has become a tradition with the managements of these establishments as reflected in the treatment visitors receive from all employes.

LOOKING WEST ON MARKET STREET

Two streets intersect Monument Circle, Meridian Street north and south, and Market Street east and west. The principal business street, Washington Street, is also the National Highway, and runs east and west one block south of the Monument.

All street car lines enter the business district, passing within two blocks of the Monument. The Washington street route is the only cross-town line. The three principal transfer points are Meridian and Maryland Streets, Pennsylvania and Washington Streets and Illinois and Washington Streets. The car fare is seven cents, or four tokens for 25 cents, transfers two cents extra. All city busses loop around Monument Circle. The bus fare is 10 cents.

All steam lines leave the Union Station, four blocks south of the monument. All interurban cars leave the Interurban Station, one block west of the Monument. All out-of-city busses leave the Traction Terminal Bus Station or the Union Bus Terminal, two blocks west of the Monument.

THINGS TO SEE

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT.

On Monument Circle, the second highest shaft in America, and commemorating the memory of Civil and Spanish War veterans. Required fifteen years to build. Cost $600,000. Designed by Bruno Schmidt, noted German architect. Statues at base are those of George Rogers Clark, Governor Whitcomb, William Henry Harrison, and Oliver P. Morton. Two sculptoral groups depict War and Peace. Museum is in basement, and observation platform reached by elevator, is at the top. Visitors are welcome.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Indianapolis' "Little Church Around the Corner". Located on the northeast segment of the Circle.

HOTEL ENGLISH

UNITED STATES POSTOFFICE.

Houses also Federal Courts and Offices, is located between Meridian and Pennsylvania, and Ohio and New York Streets, and marks the southern terminus of the Indiana War Memorial Plaza.

INDIANA WAR MEMORIAL PLAZA.

Commemorating the valor of the veterans of the late World War. This Plaza extends five blocks northward from the Postoffice, between Meridian and Pennsylvania Streets. The block north of the Federal Building is University Square. The next is occupied by the Central Shrine. The third by an obelisk surrounded by fountains illuminated at night by varicolored lights and an open terrain for the assembly of vast throngs, and the fourth and fifth by a beautiful park yet to be developed, and the Memorial Building, national and state headquarters of the American Legion, and the Indiana Chapter of the American Red Cross, already completed.

The entire project being developed by the city, county and state, will cost fifteen million dollars. The Central Shrine will cost more than three million dollars. Its interior will be furnished for various auditoriums and reading rooms for patriotic organizations. The open terrain in the block to the north is equipped with loud-speaking equipment and is used for many large public gatherings.

INDIANA STATE CAPITOL

BLACHERNE APARTMENTS

Now Spink-Arms Hotel Annex, located at Meridian and Vermont Streets, was erected by General Lew Wallace from the proceeds derived from his world-famous novel, "Len Hur."

SCOTTISH RITE CATHEDRAL.

Completed in 1927, located on North Meridian Street, between North and Walnut Streets. This masterpiece of old-world architecture has already gained a world-wide reputation for its exterior and interior beauty. It houses the various Scottish Rite bodies of the Valley of Indianapolis, which in point of numbers, ranks fourth among the Scottish Rite bodies of North America, having within the last two years, outdistanced New York City and Detroit. Its Carillon Bells are among the finest in the world. Visitors are welcome during visiting hours.

CENTRAL LIBRARY.

Said to be the most beautiful specimen of Gothic architecture in the United States. Overlooks the Plaza from the north end. It should be seen within to be appreciated. Eighteen branch libraries are scattered throughout the city.

HENRY WARD BEECHER CHURCH.

Second Presbyterian Church, formerly stood on the site now occupied by the Indianapolis Star, New York and Pennsylvania streets. The church now is at Vermont and Pennsylvania Streets, but eventually will be removed from its site at the foot of the War Memorial Shrine.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY'S HOME.

Is at 528 Lockerbie Street, which itself was the subject of one of Mr. Riley's best-known poems. Lockerbie Street runs eastward from 327 East Street or about one-half block north of East New York Street. The Riley home has been preserved as it stood when the famous poet was producing many of his best works and is open to visitors.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HOME.

INDIANAPOLIS PROPYLAEUM.

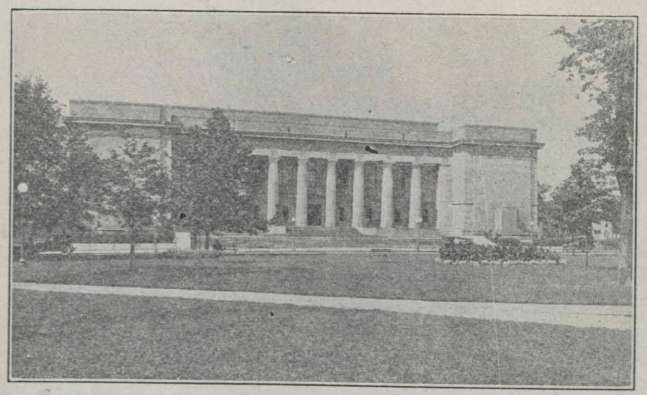
JOHN HERRON ART INSTITUTE.

Located at Sixteenth and Pennsylvania Streets. A permanent exhibit of paintings, drawings, etchings, sculpture and medallic work may be seen in the building. Works by such people as John Singer Sargent, Cecelia Beaux, Frank W. Benson, Emil Carlsen, William M. Chase, Mary Cassatt, Frank Currier, Childs Hassam, Charles W. Hawthorne, George Inness, W. L. Metcalf, Abbott Thayer and J. Alden Weir.

INDIANA STATE FAIRGROUNDS.

Representing many thousands of dollars in investment, is one of the largest and best institutions of its kind in the country. The annual State Fair is attended by approximately 250,000 people.



BEAUTIFUL BUILDINGS

May we, with pardonable pride, point out the fact that our city is known far and wide for its beautiful buildings. As one example we show the Indianapolis Public Library which faces the beautiful War Memorial Plaza.

BOOTH TARKINGTON HOME.

Located at 4526 Washington Boulevard. The Indianapolis residence of the famous author. Some of Mr. Tarkington's best-known works are "Penrod", "Seventeen", "The World Does Move", "The Gentleman from Indiana"; "The Flirt"; "Turmoil" and twenty other novels, eleven plays and a number of short stories.

BUTLER UNIVERSITY.

Located on Forty-ninth Street, east of Capitol Avenue, was founded in 1843 and is under the supervision of the Christian Church denomination. Its huge Athletic Stadium, seating 35,000 people, and its Field House, seating 15,000, are among the larger athletic institutions in the country.

CROWN HILL CEMETERY.

Located on West Thirty-fourth Street, is the fifth largest cemetery in the world, and the burial place of many famous men, including James Whitcomb Riley, Senator Albert J. Beveridge, President Benjamin Harrison, Vice President Charles Warren Fairbanks, Thomas Taggart, Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, Senator John W. Kern and Governor Oliver P. Morton.

CHARLES WARREN FAIRBANKS HOME.

At the southwest corner of Thirtieth and Meridian Streets. Now the home of the Indianapolis Life Insurance Company, but preserved in its original beauty as a memorial to the former Vice President. Visitors are welcome.

INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION.

This international home of the Typographical Union occupies the former beautiful Van Camp estate.

THOMAS TAGGART MEMORIAL.

An impressive colonnade, marking the entrance to Thomas Taggart Park, so-called because the noted Democratic statesman caused the city to acquire the land when he was Mayor twenty-five years ago, and saw it developed into one of the finest city parks in the country.

INDIANAPOLIS MOTOR SPEEDWAY.

Located on State Road No. 34, immediately outside of the city limits. Is the site of the annual 500-mile speed classic, the outstanding racing event of the world. Built in 1909, a two and a half mile brick oval, has been the proving ground of numerous advances in automotive construction. The race annually is attended by more than 150,000 people from all parts of the world, and during the balance of the year is used as a testing ground for some of the local automobile factories, such as Marmon, Stutz, etc. Visitors are welcome on every day except Sunday.

INDIANA UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER.

SPEEDWAY

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway is known the world over for the famous 500-mile classic which is run on Decoration Day. The balance of the year it is used as a testing ground by many motor car manufacturers. The Speedway is open to the public every day except Sunday.

The Medical Center includes the celebrated James Whitcomb Riley Memorial Hospital for Children, erected to the memory of the Hoosier Poet. The William H. Coleman Hospital for Women and the Robert W. Long Hospital are others in the Indiana University group.

The Indiana University Medical School and the Training School for Nurses are maintained as an integral part of the University. Organized in 1903, the medical school has been rated in Class A since the first classification of medical schools. The plant of the Medical Center has a valuation of approximately $3,500,000.

INDIANA STATE CAPITOL.

Located at Washington Street and Capitol Avenue, houses all state governmental offices. The state museum located on the first floor is open to visitors.

INDIANAPOLIS TERMINAL STATION.

Located at Illinois and Market Streets, is the largest Interurban Railway Station in the world.

INDIANAPOLIS UNION STATION.

Where 165 trains arrive and depart to all parts of the nation daily, is the first Union Railroad Station ever created. Located on South Illinois and McCrea Place.

THE TOMB OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

GARFIELD PARK.

Located between Shelby street and the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks and south of East Raymond Street, consists of more than 600 acres of beautiful rolling land in the center of which are swimming pools, community buildings, etc. On the east side of the park are the world-famous Sunken Gardens, and the largest municipally-owned Greenhouse in the country. A shrine to the soldiers of the Confederacy who were interned in Indianapolis during the Civil War, is also located at the edge of the Sunken Gardens.

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Is ten miles northeast of the city, on State Road No. 67, and may be reached by paved roads. It was notable as an officers' training camp during the World War, and is now used by the Eleventh Infantry, and the headquarters for the 139th Aerial Observation Squadron. Visitors are always welcome.

MURAT TEMPLE.

Home of the Shrine, at Massachusetts Avenue and New Jersey Streets. It also houses one of the city's finest theaters. The edifice follows an Oriental design throughout and contains an elaborate ballroom.

INDIANA RAILROAD OFFERS FAST FREIGHT SERVICE

Thousands of successful manufacturers, merchants and farmers are saving time and money by using the Dispatch Freight or express service provided by the Indiana Railroad System.

Package express and small freight consignments are handled on passenger trains, insuring delivery to any station within one to four hours of ordering from almost any point on the system. Rates for this service are only slightly higher than ordinary freight charges. If desired, shipments may be made on a C. O. D. basis.

Another attractive feature of Indiana Railroad service is the drayage absorption tariff which saves shippers the expense of collection and delivery on certain classes of freight shipments. Any local freight agent will gladly explain how you can avail yourself of this saving.

For Indianapolis

Indianapolis is the Capital of the Land of Opportunity.

Bring your dreams to Indianapolis, the city of vision, a place where dreams come true.

The pulses of the city throb with an energy drawn from the most fruitful soil in all the world.

One hundred years ago destiny marked Indianapolis for steady and triumphant progress. It is the natural center of distribution for North America. Our commerce and industries have a continent for their market. The Indianapolis label guarantees an honest job and an honest price.

From this city of homes James Whitcomb Riley sent winging his songs of light and cheer to gladden the hearts of a nation. The Riley spirit is the Indianapolis spirit of confidence and hope.

This best of cities rests solidly upon the enduring foundation of American liberty under law. By serving my city I serve my country. Each day I will help, not hinder; work, not shirk.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON.
